Eaton Doubts Legality of GOP Aid Setup Plan

House Leader Calls Truman Proposal 'Inadequate,' Asks Compromise Idea

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday questioned constitutionality of Republican proposals that a special organization be set up to administer the Marshall Plan.

"I cannot conceive," he said, "of any way in which an independent agency can be established to handle our foreign relations without invading the constitutional duties of the Chief Executive."

At the same time, Eaton labeled administrative provisions in President Truman's bill for long-range aid to Europe inadequate. He sought, he declared, some middle-of-the-road compromise between the two points of view.

Marshall Ends Vacation

Mr. Truman's program calls for a single administrator, while a bill drafted by Representative Herter (R., Mass.) and a special House committee he headed provides for an administrative agency independent of the State Department. General principles of the Herter bill are supported by Speaker Martin (R., Mass.), House Majority Leader Halleck (R., Ind.) and Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

With the Marshall Plan high on the list of matters facing Congress when it reconvenes tomorrow, its author, Secretary of State Marshall, returned yesterday from Pinehurst, N. C., where he had spent a 16-day vacation. He and his assistants have been working intensively for hearings on legislation to carry out the aid program.

Hearings Start Wednesday

Marshall himself will be the first witness at hearings of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee beginning Wednesday. The Foreign Affairs Committee of the House will meet the same day to lay out its schedule for hearings which, Eaton indicated, will seek the views of every department of the Government concerned with foreign policy, as well as the views of labor, industry, agriculture and finance.

Early approval of the Marshall Plan to assure "an army of friends in Europe as a safeguard against future wars" was urged yesterday by Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.).

"In connection with our own domestic security," Kilgore said, "I wish to warn against the Nation making the mistake of thinking that universal military training is a cure-all solution of our national security problem.

More Aid for Britain Urged

"In the final analysis, real security lies in world cooperation, and we can never hope to achieve anything resembling world cooperation unless we act immediately to aid our friends in Europe."

From the Foreign Policy Association came a warning that proposed aid to Britain under the plan, while "highly desirable" would permit the British government to continue operations only on a "marginal basis." However, it added, failure to extend even the limited aid called for in the Marshall Plan might force the United States to assume greater military obligations throughout the world.

The association's conclusions were contained in a report written by Grant S. McClellan, British Commonwealth specialist on its staff. He contended that not only would the United States probably be required to assume greater military obligations but its campaign for expansion of international trade likely would be blocked.

Mihai to Tell Story Of Abdication as Soon as Kin Get Out

Former King Mihai of Romania plans to issue a statement on the reasons for his abdication as soon as all members of his family are out of Romania, his secretary, Mirces Ionitziu, told the United Press.

Ionitziu made the announcement at Vienna, where the former King's private train stopped briefly en route to Switzerland.

Fears Rationing

Anderson's Ouster Asked By O'Daniel

By The Associated Press

Senator O'Daniel (D. Tex.) called on housewives, "all cattlemen and livestock growers" yesterday to join him in a demand that Secretary of Agriculture Anderson be ousted from the Cabinet for his views on meat rationing.

O'Daniel interpreted a Friday night statement by Anderson as meaning that the Secretary has asked that rationing of meat be set up again in view of shortages and high prices.

Anderson had predicted that Americans will be asking for meat rationing by spring.

O'Daniel got out a statement saying that rationing is a "communistic, totalitarian" measure and added:

"It will take the steaks out of the grocery stores and put them in the swanky restaurants and hotels where bloated bureaucrats can feed on them three times a day out of their fat, tax-money expense accounts."

In attacking Anderson, O'Daniel ran true to form as a consistent critic of the Administration.

Anderson said Saturday night that he had assigned Charles F. Brannan, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, to "look up what our responsibilities would be if a meat rationing program should be assigned to this department, and how we should go about it."

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) plans

Rep. Andresen Turns Sleuth In Grain Probe

Chairman on Trail Of U. S. Employes Using False Names

By the United Press

Chairman August H. Andresen of a Special House Committee investigating market trading, left Washington on a sleuthing mission yesterday to learn whether any Government employes have been speculating in grain under "fictitious" names.

Andresen said that his tour was aimed at digging up more information on the lists of speculators already made public "and other information we have received in addition."

"There undoubtedly are certain Government employes who may be operating under rather fictitious names," the Minnesota Republican said. "I may be playing Sherlock Holmes before I'm through. This thing is getting bigger and better. I opened at least 150 letters on the subject today giving more information."

Andresen refused to say where his sleuthing would center. He said he should be back by the end of this week, when he will call a meeting of his committee.

Meantime, a new blast was leveled at Andresen by the Senate Democratic whip, Scott W. Lucas of Illinois.

The Senator demanded that Andresen back up immediately his "politically motivated charges" that 200 Federal workers in Chicago are involved in a commodity speculating pool.

"These charges place every Federal employe in Chicago under a cloud," Lucas said. "In view of the

Banks Drai... Own Drive On Inflation

15,000 Membership Of ABA Enlists in Voluntary Credit Control Program

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—A voluntary anti-inflation program by 15,000 banks will be put into effect soon, Joseph M. Dodge, president of the American Bankers Association, announced today.

Dodge, president of the Detroit Bank, Detroit, said the association's program will stress control of four phases of bank credit:

First, commodity and inventory loans designed to withhold essential goods from normal market channels in anticipation of price rises should not be made in the months immediately ahead.

Second, mortgage loans for non-essential building, or construction which can be postponed until supplies and labor are more available, should be discouraged.

Third, banks should give priority to borrowers who can turn out supplies and services needed here and abroad now.

Fourth, there should be a greatly intensified drive to sell Treasury savings bonds to the public, and to promote other forms of savings, as a means of absorbing surplus money which otherwise would continue to compete for the goods and services in short supply.

The program, Dodge added, will be carried out through printed educational material, and activated through meetings of bankers and businessmen throughout the country.

The first of several cross-country sectional conferences will be in Columbus on January 23 and the last in New York February 20. Other cities to be visited include Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington, D. C., and Boston.

N. Y. Restaurants May Abandon Food-Saving Days

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—New York City's foremost eating establishments will be advised to abandon meatless Tuesdays and eggless Thursdays, beginning this week, because "that part of the food conservation program is being ignored widely," Paul Henkel, president of the Society of Restaurateurs, said today.

The society, which represents many of the better eating establishments in the city, said "the gradual increase of nonobservance is causing us a loss of business and unfair competition."

Henkel said he would recommend that the members continue the conservation of wheat products.

Over 200,000 DP's Crammed Into U. S. Zone

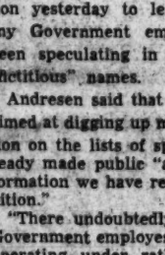
Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—More than 200,000 displaced persons who refuse to return to their homelands behind the Russian "iron curtain" are crammed into American-occupied Germany, the preparatory commission of the International Refugee Organization reported today.

The commission, in its year-end report, said that another 100,000 are just as determined to leave Germany soon and forever. These are Jews, who want to go to Palestine.

Euclid to the Contrary

Chicagoan Shows How Angle Can Be Trisected in Minute

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—Charles O. Johnston, Chicago mechanical engineer, trisected an angle in a little over a minute here, but mathematicians at the University of Chicago said he didn't follow all the rules laid down by the ancient Greek geometer Euclid—who said it couldn't be done.



Johnston

For his equipment, Johnston used a straight-edge (a ruler would work as well) and a draftsman's compass. The steps followed:

1. He drew a circle with its center on the vertex of the angle—the diameter of the circle being the width of the ruler used.

2. He bisected the angle with the compass. On the line of bisection and some distance from the vertex, he drew another circle of the same diameter. Then he connected the sides of the two circles with parallel lines (these lines running on each side of the line of bisection).

3. Putting the angle in the position of a "V," he placed the ruler directly over the vertex circle—with the upper left corner of the ruler on the left line of the angle to be trisected.

How Trisected Angle Looks

At this stage of operations he drew a line between the ruler's upper left and right corners. This line became the base of a triangle, one angle of which was one third of the size of the original angle (after the triangle's third side was completed by dropping a line to the vertex of the original angle).

4. Step 3 was repeated in reverse on the right side of the original angle. The remaining third of the angle to be trisected was the space between the triangles on the left and right.

University of Chicago mathematicians said, however, that under Euclid's reasoning, only one side of a straight-edge could be employed and only for the purpose of joining two points.

... Children Die as Train Hits Sled

Archbold, Ohio, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Ten children, being taken for a sleigh ride by a neighbor farmer, were killed instantly today when a New York Central passenger train speeding along at 80 miles an hour hit their tractor-drawn bobsled at an unguarded grade crossing.

Two other children were injured in the crash, called "one of the worst highway accident death tolls on record" by the National Safety Council in Chicago.

The driver, Jesse Wyse, said he "went stiff" at the sight of the onrushing train and stalled his vehicle while the sleigh was on the tracks.

"It was just an accident," said Lawrence Greiser, father of four of the dead children. "We don't blame Wyse."

Wyse's son and daughter and another daughter of Greiser's were the only survivors. Wyse's son was sitting on the back of the sled and jumped off safely. The two girls were injured.

There were 13 children on the sled.

Wyse said he stopped when he reached the crossing. He looked up and down, he said, and seeing no train started across.

"I had just crossed with the tractor when I looked up and saw the train," he said. "I just went stiff."

Wyse said he had promised the

Parents Plan To Continue School Strike

All Browne Pupils To Stay Out Today, Spokesman Declares

Parents of pupils at the two Browne Junior High School annexes intend to continue their strike, even if their children lose a half year of school.

This statement was made yesterday by Gardner L. Bishop, spokesman for the parents' steering committee, as one weekend development in the situation:

1. The Federation of Citizens Associations asked the District Board of Education to invoke compulsory school attendance laws in the strike, which has been going on since December 3 at the Blow and Webb annexes of Browne Junior High School.

2. Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the District Board of Education, explained that school officials and the board have consistently urged that the parents voluntarily put their children back in school. "We all have hoped that these well intentioned people will see the detriment they are doing to their children and put them back in school," Mrs. Doyle said, when informed of the federation stand.

3. Bishop told reporters that the strike at the annexes is expected to be "100 per cent effective" when school reconvenes after the holidays today, thus removing the last 15 or 20 pupils from classes at the annexes.

Mrs. Doyle said yesterday that if parents would return their children to classes today, the pupils

Moderate to Heavy Snow Forecast in 3 Coastal States

By the United Press

The Weather Bureau in a special bulletin last night forecast "moderate to heavy snow" for southeastern New York State, New Jersey and Delaware.

The bureau warned that "new snow accumulations of 3 to 6 inches" were expected last night and early today.

"Driving conditions will be hazardous especially in southeastern New York and northern New Jersey," the bulletin said.

The bureau said the storm, developing in eastern North Carolina, will deepen rapidly and move northeastward to the Delaware coast by 2 a. m. EST. today.

[The snow prediction came as New York City and its environs applied the mopping-up touches to the 25.8-inch record snowfall of December 26.

[What railroad officials called the biggest passenger rush in 17 years swamped trains in New York Sunday as an aftermath of the storm, the Associated Press said.

[A spokesman for the New York Central Railroad said it was the greatest rush since before 1930.]

2 to 4 Inches of Snow Forecast for District

A snowfall of from 2 to 4 inches was predicted for Washington by the Weatherman last night, with the snow ceasing "sometime after midnight."

Weather Bureau officials said the "total snow accumulation" during the night would fall within the 2 to 4 inch figure, not counting the light snow which fell yesterday afternoon. Lowest temperature last night was expected to be 28. High yesterday was 36, with a low of 30 degrees.

Today is expected to be mostly cloudy, mildly cold and windy.

GSI Walkout Due to Start At 5 A. M.

250 'Replacements' Hired to Help 350 Supervisors Keep Cafeterias Running

(Union Statement, Page 12)

Picketing of 42 cafeterias in Federal buildings is scheduled to begin at 5 a. m. today—ushering in a strike of more than 1600 CIO employes of Government Services, Inc.

Final plans for the walkout, expected to upset working-hour dining habits of some 80,000 Government employes, were drawn yesterday at a rally of union members in Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 9th st. nw.

Employes, estimated by union officials at almost 1000, heard their leaders promise them full CIO support and urge them to "die on their feet fighting like free men rather than submit . . . to slavery."

Richard Bancroft, president of Cafteria Workers Local 471 (CIO), told members their "fight before it ends will become the concern of the Democratic National Committee and the White House."

Strike Held Only Choice

Oliver Palmer, union business agent, assured workers that "if there were an alternative" to a strike "we would take it." But, he added, "there is no alternative."

Immediate affect of the anticipated work stoppage, according to J. C. Niehuss, a GSI official, will be to "interrupt" service in all the struck cafeterias. He said the Labor Department cafeteria is expected to be shut down immediately while at other cafeterias service will be "limited."

Niehuss predicted that today's menus will be fuller than those for tomorrow because some of the food was prepared Friday. However, he said, bacon and eggs will be missing from breakfast servings, no pies and cakes will be served for luncheon desserts and some dinner meals will be curtailed.

250 "Replacements" Hired

What service is offered will be provided by 350 supervisory employes and some 250 newly hired "replacements," Niehuss declared. Workers slated to join the walkout include cooks, bakers, salad makers, steam table servers, coffee makers, pot washers, dish washers and general helpers.

Further replacements will be hired as soon as the corporation determines how workers support the strike, he said.

"The corporation," Niehuss declared, "is extremely sorry that such a senseless, useless strike is to take place. Is could have been prevented very easily if union officers had taken an oath against communism."

His reference was to a management demand that union officers file non-Communist affidavits, a position which led to a full collapse of negotiations more than a month ago.

6½c Pay Boost Offered

Since the corporation has offered to boost workers' wages directly by 6½ cents hourly. The union has asked for a flat boost of 15 cents an hour, claiming that wages now range from 73½ cents to $1.20½ hourly.

Cafeteria workers struck for eight days early last year, later winning an arbitration award of 10½ cents an hour.

Yesterday's union rally heard an unscheduled message from Mary McLeod Bethune, president

Dynamite Hidden In Orange Crates By Stern Gang In Jaffa Attack

Jerusalem, Palestine, Jan. 4 (U.P.). Dark skinned Jews, dressed as Arabs, slipped into all-Arab Jaffa today and blew up the crowded headquarters and Arab Higher Committee and Arab underground army, Najada, with a truckload of dynamite hidden in orange crates.

Official reports said that 15 Arabs, had been killed and that at least 40 others were injured.

Earlier, officials listed 30 persons injured and 40 Arabs believed missing.

[The Associated Press said two thousand Arabs and Jews were killed elsewhere in Palestine and 4 Jews died of wounds received in recent days. Today's death toll raised the total to 555 persons killed in Arab-Jewish violence since November 29.]

Officials said there were two almost simultaneous explosions in Jaffa before the Arab headquarters was wrecked, that a police station was extensively damaged and 15 shops in the vicinity considerably damaged.

Toll May Increase

Officials believed that the casualty total would mount. The air about the wreckage of the headquarters was filled late tonight with the groans, shouts and curses of the wounded and trapped.

Palestine government, British army and Arab Red Crescent (Cross) ambulances were still hauling off the wounded and all three hospitals in Jaffa were full.

An emergency call was sent for every available Arab physician in Jaffa.

Stern Gang Responsible

The stern gang telephoned the United Press and said it was responsible for the bombing.

Witnesses reported that two trucks and a limousine were involved. One truck was filled with dynamite or gelignite concealed in orange crates.

Both trucks, it was said, drove

Jewish Agency Asks U. N. Police Force

Tel Aviv, Palestine, Jan. 4 (AP). Moshe Shertok, director of the Jewish Agency's political department, said tonight the agency had asked the United Nations for an international police force to maintain order in Palestine pending creation of separate Jewish and Arab states.

Shertok said the request had been presented to the U. N. secretariat. The agency also asked, if this request were refused, that Hagana, the Jewish defense organization, be furnished with arms.

France Needs New Regime, De Gaulle Says

'Political Parties' Unable to Solve Problems, He Asserts

By Walter Kerr

Saint-Etienne, Jan. 4 (NYHT).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, in his first public speech since his victory in the October municipal elections, said here today the time had come to rebuild France according to the plans of his Rally of the French People (RPF).

He meant his own return to power, and thousands in this industrial city southwest of Lyon called upon him to take it.

De Gaulle said neither the present government nor any other operating under the existing National Assembly could solve the country's problems.

He called for new national elections now and outlined a program of his own that, he said, would bring about stabilization of the franc, of prices and of wages.

This same objective is causing difficulty in Paris tonight, but General De Gaulle said the present administration could not succeed. He spoke scornfully of a

Police Search For Palestine TNT's Origin

N. Y. Storehouse Clews Fail; Cargo Guarded on Barge

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Police revisited today a Bronx warehouse which they linked to a seized TNT consignment for Palestine, but said they found nothing to explain the shipment.

The explosives were discovered and seized yesterday at a pier in Jersey City.

Tonight they were aboard a barge anchored far out in the harbor. The barge flew a signal warning, "Explosives — Keep Clear." On a tug anchored nearby, a watchman warned all passing ships to keep at least 500 feet away.

A further examination of crates in the Bronx warehouse today disclosed radio transmitting equipment, sewer piping, machine motors, and electronic equipment.

The Washington Post Poll

90% Here Indorse Freedom of the Press But Many Stress Particular Reservations

Ninety per cent of the people in Greater Washington believe in freedom of the press, the Washington Post Poll finds.

Nearly half (49 per cent) believe that freedom of the press means "freedom to print anything you want."

But this indorsement of one of the basic freedoms contained in the Bill of Rights breaks down when applied to a specific case.

Now awaiting a Supreme Court decision is the case of a New York dealer who was arrested for selling sensational crime magazines, violating a New York statute. The dealer contends that this statute is a violation of freedom of the press.

Asked whether such magazines should be banned, Washingtonians split, regardless of their views on freedom of the press. Forty-four per cent contend that sensational crime and sex magazines should be outlawed, mainly because of their bad influence on young people. Forty-one per cent maintained that they should not be banned. But only a few base their opposition on grounds that it would be a violation of the freedom of the press. Most frequent reason for approving publication of such material was because of its educational value in warning people against trouble they might get into.

The following findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on interviews with a representative cross section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Residents were asked:

"Do you believe in freedom of the press?"

Answers were as follows:

	Per cent saying
Yes, believe in freedom of the press	91%
Yes, with qualifications (within security limits, except for libel, etc)	4
No, doesn't believe in it	1
Undecided	4

Washingtonians were then asked:

"What does freedom of the press mean to you?"

They replied:

Definitions of Freedom of the Press	Per cent saying
Freedom to print anything you want	43%
Freedom to print the truth, facts	26
Freedom to print criticisms	4
Freedom to print anything within security limits	3
Freedom to print anything but slander or libel	3
Freedom to print anything, but the too sensational	3
Other definitions	4
Unable to give a definition	14

Eighty-six per cent had some idea of what freedom of the press means, and in defining it, the largest group placed no qualifications at all on the freeedom to print anything.

That there is a good deal of support for moralistic censorship of printed material in spite of these views was shown by answers to the following question, asked after a group of unrelated questions.

"Do you think magazines should be banned for printing sensational stories about sex and crime?"

The answers:

	All Groups	AGE
Favor banning such magazines	44%	36%	42%	46%	51%	47%
Opposed to banning them	41	50	43	37	37	37
Undecided	15	14	15	17	12	16

Grandma and grandpa are much more likely to want to censor such reading material than their children and grandchildren.

Views on banning sensational sex and crime magazines were almost totally unrelated to attitudes toward freedom of the press. Of those who maintained freedom of the press means freedom to print anything, 44 per cent favored banning these magazines, and an equal number opposed it.

Asked why they thought these magazines should be banned, 62 per cent of this group said they have a bad influence on the young; 16 per cent said they are bad for people in general; 9 per cent stated that even though such things exist, there is no reason to broadcast them; and the remainder gave a variety of reasons.

Many who favored banning sensational sex and crime magazines, however, added that they approved of the proper kind of sex education for the young, and some suggested that children should be given sex instruction in school.

Those opposed to banning the magazines gave the following main reasons: they have an educational value in warning people of pitfalls in life (23 per cent); such a ban would be a violation of freedom of the press (16 per cent); such things exist and should not be covered up (15 per cent); people have a right to chose their own reading, they don't have to read these magazines if they don't want to (11 per cent); and finally, they said it is impossible to ban them, for people would get them somehow (10 per cent).

Ten Castaways Await Rescue on Alaskan Coast

Kodiak, Alaska, Jan. 4 (AP).—Nine or 10 gale-buffeted castaways clung today to a rocky point of the bleck Alaska Peninsula, opposite Kodiak Island, awaiting rescue by a Navy tug and Coast Guard clipper which have been unable to put boats ashore in the 60-mile-an-hour storm.

Three of the men are crewmen from the Navy tug Mataco. Sheathed in frozen spindrift, they struggled to shore after their surf boat capsized last night in a daring rescue attempt.

The other castaways have been stranded for four days after their 65-foot cannery tender, the motorship Spencer, struck a reef December 31 and broke up in the pounding surf.

The Coast Guard cutter Clover radioed at 12:42 p. m. that it could not make a landing immediately due to heavy seas and high winds, but would launch a boat at the first opportunity.

Navy authorities here identified one of the stranded crewmen from the Mataco as Lieut. (j. g.) E. J. Kratochvil.

(The Navy in Washington said Lieutenant Kratchovil is married and has a home at 520 8th st. se., Washington, D. C.).

(At Binghamton, N. Y., relatives of Lieutenant Kratchovil said he is a veteran of 18 years' service in the Navy. Miss Louise Kratchovil, a sister, said he had been stationed at Kodiak, Alaska, for three years. During World War II he served on Navy submarine chasers in the Atlantic.)

Favoritism Probed In Aid to Greece

Red Outlook

Brewster 'Encouraged' On Europe

By The Associated Press

Prospects for saving western Europe from Communism are "much more encouraging" in several countries, Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said last night.

Brewster, arriving at Washington National Airport after a holiday tour through Europe, said he found there "a feeling that they are going to have to do their own part, particularly in England," to make the European recovery plan work.

The Maine Senator said he was encouraged by the steps which have been taken in Italy and France. He praised French Premier Schuman, and said "the Italian government has strengthened itself in recent weeks by taking in some middle of the road elements."

Of Greece, where he spent two days, Brewster said the emergency aid this country has already extended has saved the situation, but he added, "I don't know how far it leads."

The mosst interesting aspect of the Greek situation, he continued, is that "we have been successful in persuading them that it is our fight."

He said Greeks felt their country was a scene of conflict between the United States and Soviet Russia and they cannot understand why the Greeks should be doing the fighting.

Senator Brewster said the Greek army was "well equipped and well disciplined, but not too belligerent." He added that the American mission in Greece was doing a good job and he did not consider the Greek situation "awfully serious now."

Asked if there was any sign of Russian backing of the guerillas, he replied: "All I can say is the material used is not of Greek origin."

The Maine Senator said he found no evidence of concern in the countries he visited over a possible change in United States foreign policy in event of a Republican presidential victory this year.

"They are more concerned about Henry Wallace [third party candidate for President]," he said. "They feel Henry might mix things up a little."

Brewster said it still is not possible to guarantee that the Marshall Plan will save western European countries from Communism, but he declared the picture is much more encouraging than when he visited many of the same countries last April.

Reds Aid Greek Rebels, State Department Says

By The Associated Press

The State Department published yesterday a mass of evidence to back United States charges that Greece's Communist neighbors are arming the guerillas.

Detailing in a 25,000 word official document last year's efforts to settle the frontier fighting through the United Nations, the department summarized findings of the United Nations Balkan investigating committee and said:

"This material shows that foreign assistance to the Greek guerillas was continued on a considerable scale even during the period of active consideration of the Greek problem by the Security Council, and that Albania, Bulgaria and Yogoslavia consistently refused to cooperate in any way with the work of the United Nations subsidary group."

The report of this subsidiary group was summarized by the State Department. It included testimony of more than a score of witnesses that a large scale guerilla attack on Konitsa last July 9-13 was launched from Albania.

Senators Checking Charges U. S. Firms Got Contract Edge

By the United Press

The Senate Appropriations Committee is checking reports of alleged favoritism shown some American firms in the award of reconstruction contracts under the 300-million-dollar Greek aid program, it was revealed yesterday.

Chairman Styles Bridges confirmed that his committee is making a preliminary inquiry into charges that a "favorite few firms, close to the Administration," have received lucrative contracts for construction of wharves, roads and railroad facilities.

In a telephone statement from his Concord, N. H., home, Bridges said that committee members likewise were checking up on the suitability of commodities purchased in this country for Greece, and on procurement practices.

If preliminary findings bear out the allegations, it was indicated the committee would open a full-scale investigation in connection with an anticipated Administration request for more funds for Greece.

A committee member said the attention of Senators was drawn to alleged irregularities during a first-hand survey of Greek aid operations at Athens last summer. Members at that time questioned Dwight P. Griswold, director of the United States program, and members of his staff.

This source said that information received both at that time and later indicated shortcomings in contract awards and purchasing were traceable to officials here. He said that the Army Corps of Engineers is being asked to provide full information on its contract award to United States construction firms for work on Greek railroads, highways, ports and canals.

A factor in the charges, it was disclosed, is reports that United States firms "bid up" contract prices for goods—both military and civilian—to be provided under the "quarantine communism" program.

Bridges declined to reveal details of his committee's inquiry, other than to emphasize their preliminary nature.

A recent report from President Truman on initial operations of the Greek program revealed that Army engineers have awarded management-construction contracts to "combinations of private firms" for railroad and road construction and rehabilitation of Greek ports and canals.

Greek Queen Greets Troops At Ioannina

Athens, Jan. 4 (AP).—Queen Frederika stopped in Ioannina today and delivered to Greek soldiers and townspeople the good wishes of her ailing husband, King Paul. She is en route to Konitsa.

Press dispatches from the frontier said Greek engineers trying to reconstruct the Bourozani bridge 11 miles west of Konitsa—along the possible route of the Queen—were still being harassed by guerilla artillery fire.

The dispatches said also that air reconnaissance had spotted southwest troop movements across the Albanian border toward Philiates, a border town 38 miles southwest of Konitsa.

Minister of War George Stratos was in Salonika en route to Thrace, where Greek informants said new guerilla operations might be launched from the Bulgarian border. Stratos was quoted as saying the guerillas were using a battery of artillery in the Souphli area, virtually on the Turkish border.

U. S.-Britain Force Urged To Patrol Greek Border

London, Jan. 4 (U.P.). — The People, a Sunday newspaper, said today that Britain would soon propose to the United States that a joint American-British force be established along the Greek border to prevent Communists from entering the country from neighboring states in the Russian orbit.

The article said Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin would consider the transfer of British troops from Palestine to Greece for the frontier force.

Free Burma Ratifies Pact With Britain

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Burmese Parliament today overrode Communist opposition and ratified a treaty with Britain in its first act as a sovereign assembly.

While the lawmakers voted, thousands of citizens surged through the streets of the capital shouting "We are free, we are free," in celebration of the end of 122 years of British rule.

President Sao Shwe Thaik rode through the streets to the parliamentary session, smiling and acknowledging cries of "long live our President!"

The treaty gives Britain permission to maintain military missions in Burma, provides for the transfer of 37 small vessels to the Burmese navy and the canceling of 60 million dollars in Burmese debts to Britain.

[In Washington, Robert A. Lovett, Undersecretary of State, extended greetings to the new republic as its flag was raised over the Burmese Embassy. He expressed hope the flag would be dedicated to democratic principles of freedom and would symbolize "the cordial meeting of the east and west."]

Plan for Lords

London, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—A committee of Conservative peers was reported today to have a plan to reform the House of Lords by abolishing hereditary membership.

U.S., Vatican Denounced by Italian Red

Milan, Italy, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Italian Communist Boss Palmiro Togliatti denounced the United States and the Vatican as the world's biggest warmongers today in a six-hour speech at the opening here of Italy's sixth Communist congress.

Moscow-trained Togliatti spoke without interruption from 2:45 p. m. to 8:45 p. m. before 3500 delegates representing Italy's 2,250,000 Communists, the biggest Communist Party outside Russia.

Europe's top Communists, including Britain's Harry Pollitt and France's Maurice Thorez, were among the representatives.

Togliatti led the congress in singing the Internationale and warmly embraced both Pollitt and Thorez as they stepped to the stage. Hungary's Minister of Interior Lazlo Rajk and Yugoslav Communist Nicola Kovacevitz led their delegations in without ceremony.

Three huge pictures of Stalin, Lenin and Togliatti formed a backdrop for the stage.

"The danger of war is the consequence of expansion and the program of world domination by an imperialistic power," Togliatti said. "This is the kind of process going on now in the United States.

"But there is another power, the Vatican, which, while conducting on the one side a campaign for peace in general terms that delude the people, on the other side lines up with the imperialistic powers any time the international situation worsens."

This was the first time Togliatti had publicly attacked the Catholic Church as a warmonger, a favorite Communist word.

Togliatti devoted two of his six hours to blasting American foreign policy and the Marshall Plan. He charged Americans with making enormous war profits. America, he said, did not suffer losses equal to those of Russia, France, Italy or the eastern European countries.

"Aid to Europe is for Americans an obligation and not a sign of special generosity," Togliatti declared.

Marines Arouse Italian Leftist Papers' Wrath

Rome, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Extreme leftist newspapers combined into one story today the announcement that American stopgap aid will begin shortly, and reports American Marines will join units of the United States Mediterranean fleet.

The Communist newspaper Unita described the fleet reinforcement as a new American provocation. It said the interim aid program subjected Italians to the interests of Wall Street.

The left wing Socialist paper Avanti called the two events "clubs and carrots in a single day."

Trieste Costing U. S. 20 Million Yearly in Food

Trieste, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States is pouring food into the British-American zone of the Free Territory of Trieste at the rate of 20 million dollars' worth a year, and there is little prospect of a settlement to lessen the need for American help.

The deadline set by the United Nations Security Council for Italy and Yugoslavia to agree on a nominee for governor of the territory will be reached tomorrow. No one here expects such agreement within the near future.

British-American sources here believe only a general easing of the differences between the western nations and Russia will end the Trieste deadlock. All factions were digging in for an expected lengthy military occupation.

Slavs Close Off Road

The British and Americans have 10,000 occupation troops—5000 each—in their zone, which includes the City of Trieste and some surrounding area. The Yugoslavs have 5000 troops in their occupation zone in the free territory.

The Yugoslavs, in the last few days, erected permanent barriers across roads between Yugoslavia and the British-American zone, after Yugoslav guards fired at several persons who tried to run across.

The United Nations Security Council, unable to agree on a nominee for governor, approved a United States suggestion that Italy and Yugoslavia be asked to name a candidate by January 5. Conversations have been going on in Rome between Yugoslav and Italian officials, with no indication of agreement.

Situation Summarized

This was the situation today:

1. The Communist political bloc backed by Marshal Tito's regime in Belgrade, is thumping for a governor and charging the Italians, Americans and British with stalling.

2. Some anti-Communist political forces want union with Italy, others a free territory.

3. Highly placed western sources say the Communists hope for a civil governor so they can infiltrate father into the British-American zone and gan political control. The Yugoslav zone is already communized, these sources add.

4. No one here expects the British and Americans to be maneuvered into a withdrawl pending a better understanding with the Soviet Union.

With United States food alone sent in at the annual rate of 20 million dollars since the Italian peace treaty in September the people, by European standards, are well fed. Public works projects, road building, housing and rubble clearing keep many busy.

Relief programs care for the unemployed.

Political tension remains high and there are frequent bombing incidents.

Mihai to Explain Abdication As Soon as Kin Leave Romania

Vienna, Austria, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Former King Mihai of Romania plans to issue a statement to the world on his abdication as soon as all members of his family reach the safety of foreign soil, his private secretary said tonight.

Mihai's plan was announced by Mirces Ionitziu, his private secretary, as the former King's eight-car special train passed through Vienna on the way to Switzerland, where it is due tomorrow.

Ionitziu was shown newspaper reports that Mihai quit under outright Communist pressure. He commented:

"I cannot deny these reports. At the moment, however, I cannot talk about the motives which caused the King's abdication."

Awaits Aunts' Departure

Ionitziu intimated that the King intended to issue his statement as soon as his aunts, Princess Elisabeth and Princess Ileana left Romania. They remained behind until next week, Ionitziu said, for "technical"—presumbaly family—reasons.

Ionitziu said Mihai was eager to see Princess Anne of Bourbon Parma, whom he is expected to marry.

"We sold some wine and other items which were the King's personal property before we left to get some money," Ionitziu said.

"His Majesty intends to stay in Lausanne, Switzerland, until his affairs are settled and he has discussed things with Princess Anne," Ionitziu said. "The King is awfully eager to see her. He expects that she will be in Switzerland when he gets there."

Mihai is doomed to disappointment there, however. A United Press Copenhagen dispatch said the princess was prepared to join Mihai on shortest notice but has not yet succeeded in contacting him. She will not leave Copenhagen until she has a message from him, her mother said.

[A responsible informant said Mihai's marriage to Princess Anne was tentatively scheduled for February, the Associated Press reported.

[The train was 94 minutes behind schedule. When reporters asked why, Ionitziu replied: "It is better to be late than . . ."

[No Romanian official bade Mihai farewell when he departed last night, an informant said. The only incident was described as an unpleasant scene at one Romanian station, created by persons celebrating the advent of the "people's democracy." The train's delays, it was asserted, had no "political significance."

When the train began to move out of Vienna's station, Mihai's secretary pointed to a window. A blind was raised. There stood Mihai, bareheaded and motionless in a brown sports jacket. His unhappy face may have mirrored some of the things the secretary had been cautious not to say.]

Tito Talk Cordial

Belgrade, Jan. 4 (AP).—United States Ambassador Cavendish Cannon who conferred with Marshal Tito for more than an hour yesterday said they talked about relations between Yugoslavia and the U. S. "with special emphasis on economic aspects," in "the most cordial atmosphere."

Pravda Accuses West Of Stalling Appointment

Moscow, Jan. 4 (AP).—Pravda charged today the United States and Britian were not interested in appointment of a governor for the Free Territory of Trieste because absence of a governor delays withdrawal of British-American troops from the area.

Reds Seek Uranium In Abandoned Mines

Escaped German PW Describes Feverish Activity in Czechoslavakia Sector

Frankfurt, Jan. 4.—Abandoned silver mines on the Czech side of the German-Czech frontier are being "feverishly exploited for uranium," the raw material from which atom bombs are made.

This was the claim made here today by Ernst Schuetze of Fortmund, a 27-year-old German escaped prisoner of war.

The old silver mines in the area of St. Joachimstal, a radioactive spa in Czechoslovakia which furnished the original pitchblende developed into radium by Madame Marie Curie, are being worked by an estimated 2000 German prisoners of war under the direction of Soviet engineers, Schuetze stated.

This agrees with previous data gathered by American and British intelligence agencies that the Soviet Union was exploiting the erzegebirge (ore mountains) on both sides of the German-Czech borders for uranium.

Schuetze, who escaped from the region in September, reported the area was heavily guarded by troops. The main labor force, he said, consists of German prisoners.

Soviet engineers have modernized mining operations in the St. Joachimstal region, Schuetze said. The processed ore is sealed in metal containers, each weighing 150 pounds. Two or three freight car loads daily move out of St. Joachimsthal and are believed to go directly to the USSR.

Approximately 500 Russian technicians and their families are now settled in the area. Scheutze said that former German SS (Elite Guard) men were given the choice of thoroughly cowing the prisoners or being shipped to Siberia.

French Cheer De Gaulle Talk

"regime" of political parties. He would replace it, he intimated, by some form of regime of parties—headed by himself. His words were not broadcast, for political speeches are banned by the state-owned radio system.

De Gaulle elected Saint-Etienne for today's demonstration because, like Marseille, it witnessed great disturbances during the November strike wave.

His proposals to halt strikes and increase production called for "compulsory arbitration" between employers and employes, with wages paid according to individual output and the output of the factory or industry. He would form "associations" of owners and workers, and these associations would be represented in a new parliamentary body.

Trade Unionism Opposed

The purpose of the plan is to take trade unionism out of politics, for De Gaulle objects as much to the new anti-Communist "workers' strength" movement as he does to the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (C.G.T.).

De Gaulle's program for stabilization was more detailed than he has made it before, but he mainly supported his theory that no government but his own would be capable of carrying it out.

"Stabilization," he declared, "is only possible by very hard means which will become more difficult to cut public expenditures to the bone by suppressing entire services, by reducing all others, by putting in order our nationalized industries, by reforming the fiscal system, notably to prevent anyone from escaping taxation; to increase production by increasing the work of all Frenchmen; by lifting controls on everything except certain items such as coal, bread, milk, sugar and fats; to reduce the consumption of some items, such as imported gasoline; to reestablish discipline and a sense of responsibility in public services.

"When it is a question of deciding upon them and, above all, of applying them, the regime of the political parties cannot help but fail," he asserted.

Urgency Is Stressed

Then De Gaulle, to cheers and shouts of "au pouvoir," (to power), spoke of the urgency of the hour.

"It is high time that this playing around and this weakness cease. It is high time that our people, after new elections, controlled the public power in accordance with its will.

"It is high time that those who are trying to push France to ruin, in order to establish here their dictatorship to the advantage of the conquerors of the East (the Russians), miss the opportunities that they find in our weakness and in our misery. It is high time that the Republican state was rebuilt from head to foot, as the rally of the French People would like to rebuild it."

In his call for increased production, he said aid under the Marshall Plan could only be temporary. In any case, he said, France would have to pay for this help in ony way or another.

U. N. Interim Unit Facing Red Boycott

Lake Success, Jan. 4 (AP).—A Soviet spokesman said today Russia is ready to carry out her threatened boycott of the United Nations "Little Assembly" which begins its year-round sittings tomorrow.

Russia is expected to be joined in the boycott by the five other nations in the Soviet bloc—Czechoslovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, White Russia and Soviet Ukraine. Each has backed the Soviet stand that the "Little Assembly" is unconstitutional and was designed by the United States as a means of undermining the Security Council.

Several other countries may not be represented. Up to last night, only 40 of the 57 nations had named their representatives. These include Egypt, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Iceland, Iraq, Liberia, Pakistan, Paraguay, Peru, Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Organizational questions will occupy most of tomorrow's session. Among those mentioned for the post of "Little Assembly" chairman are Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, Fernand van Langenhove of Belgium and Nasrollah Entezam of Iran. The chairman will represent a small country.

Major item on the "Little Assembly" agenda is the veto issue.

John Foster Dulles of the United States, minimized the danger of the Soviet boycott and expressed a belief Russia might eventually take her seat, the United Press said.

to introduce shortly legislation which would authorize the Agriculture Department to draw up plans for meat rationing on a hold-in-reserve basis.

To put them into effect—if that is found necessary—Flanders would have another bill for action by Congress. He explained that this course would leave up to Congress, rather than the Administration, the final decision on whether to ration meat.

Morse Sees Controls

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) meanwhile continued his opposition to meat rationing, in a radio talk. He said:

"The farmer is not going to look with any kindness upon any proposal that seeks to set himself off by himself, subject him to controls, but leaves the manufacturer, whose products he has to use, not subject to controls."

Morse did not list them, but did say "I think that we are going to have rationing of short supply materials."

In Chicago, the American Meat Institute declared in a statement that meat rationing talk "is confusing the entire industry," and added:

"If this is kept up, livestock production will be discouraged, and that will mean projection of undersupplies of meat further into this year, next year, and even 1950."

The institute predicted: "Rationing of meat will divert it from legitimate channels wherein the average person is able to get it now. . . . Remember the empty meat cases and the signs, 'Sorry, no meat today.'" reliability of his source, I trust he will not hesitate to state immediately just who it was gave him the information and, if necessary, summon undr subpeno before his committee any witnesses who can substantiate the charges he has made.

"Unless this is speedily don I shall have more to say on this subject."

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson a week ago called on Representative Andresen to "put up or shut up" on the same issue. Andresen denied he had made any charges whatsoever.

"I told Anderson the committee wanted the results of his investigation last fall involving around 200 Government employes in Chicago who were allegedly speculating in the Chicago market," he said.

"He denied there was an investigation. But on December 29 he announced the first list as a result of the investigation giving the names of 88 Government employes all speculating in wheat on the Chicago market."

Since then the Secretary has announced additional names of Government employes trading on the commodities markets, Andresen added, "so he has provided at least part of that information."

Senate investigators spent a busy Sunday going over the personal records of Edwin W. Pauley. The records were handed to them at 11:15 o'clock Saturday night by Pauley's attorney.

Pauley, special assistant to Secretary of Army Kenneth C. Royall, has been listed by the Agriculture Department as having large speculative holdings in grain, cottonseed oil and other commodities before and after he reentered Government service last September.

Anderson released another list of 750 big time commodity traders over the weekend. Pauley's name was on this list, which included traders who were in the market between January 1, 1946, and November 30, 1947.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), who has been active on the Appropriations subcommittee looking into speculation, said there would be a committee meeting today at which the agenda for future speculation hearings might be discussed.

He said the subcommittee also expected to get today a transcript of the grain trading records of Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, President Truman's personal physician, from the brokerage firm of Bache & Co.

There was little immediate comment on Capitol Hill on the West Coast announcement by Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath that Pauley had resigned as national committeeman from California.

Hearings Scheduled On Steel Price 'Plot'

FTC Charges Pact Not to Expand Output; Macy Reports $1,000,000 'Gray' Market

By the United Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it would open hearings here January 12 on its charge that the Nation's steel producers had agreed in an "unlawful conspiracy" to fix prices and throttle competition.

The commission is empowered, after conducting hearings, to issue a cease-and-desist order enforceable in the courts.

Its charges already have been denied in general terms by the American Iron and Steel Institute, New York, and the 101 individual companies which were named in the complaint.

Most of the firms have reserved the right to ask for dismissal of the proceedings on grounds the commission "lacks jurisdiction."

Another facet of the steel-price picture gets an airing here beginning today when a House Public Works Subcommittee headed by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) begins delving into an alleged one million dollars "gray market" in steel. High officials of the steel industry have been asked to testify.

Macy said it is estimated that 12 per cent of the Nation's steel production "finds its way into this vicious market" and that, as a result, some steel has sold from six to seven times above mill prices.

The FTC said its hearings would be conducted before Trial Examiner Frank Hier. Lynn C. Paulson, the FTC's assistant chief trial counsel and associate chief of its antimonopoly trials division, will handle the Government's case.

The commission charged in its original complaint August 17 and in an amended order November 16 that the 101 steel producers, through the institute, have reached a "meeting of the minds . . . to restrain and lessen competition . . . (and) prevent deviations from their announced prices."

Jews Blast Arab Center

up to the committee headquarters building, which platoons of Najada men guard day and night. Both trucks were parked in Clock Square.

The Jews in the truck filled with explosives got out and into either the othtr truck or the limousine. The two vehicles roared off.

A few moments later the explosion occurred.

The front of the building was torn off. All windows were smashed. Doors were buckled. Shops all around the headquarters were badly damaged. Barclay's Bank next door caught fire. Pedestrians were blown off their feet for a block or more.

W. V. Fuller, the Lydda district commissioner, who directed rescue work, said it looked as "if a buzz bomb struck here." Besides children, the victims included members of some of the most prominent Arab families in Palestine.

Auni Hannoun, member of the Arab National Committee and a nephew of the mayor of Jaffa, was wounded. A member of the Abu Laban clan, the most influential in the coastal belt, was wounded.

Of the wounded, about 20 were said to be in serious condition.

[Meanwhile, rain soaked out a bitter two-day Arab siege of the Jewish quarter within the old Walled City of Jerusalem, but the lull seemed likely to be brief.

[Approximately 1500 Jews were cut off by the Arabs in the ancient and sacred section of Jerusalem. From positions at the eight gates and atop the walls of the old city the Arabs brought the Jewish quarter under their guns. One Arab roadblock was broken open by police using tear gas.

[Flashes of tommygun fire and grenade explosions pierced the darkness. Rain-drenched Jewish and Arab fighters sought each other out in the twisting, narrow streets.

[Scottish infantrymen and police moved into the walled city—a pivot of Middle East history for 3000 years—in an attempt to pry the battling Jews and Arabs apart.

[Both sides had threatened to step up the pace. A spokesman for the Jewish agency said the Jews would "shoot up an Arab road block" at one of the gates if necessary to lift the siege. He explained that no food convoy has reached the 1500 surrounded Jews since last Thursday and added: "Naturally the old city won't be blocked for any length of time with us looking on as spectators."

[The Arabs asserted guerillas from Syria, Lebanon and Transjordan had slipped into the walled city to bolster Palestine Arabs. One informant said 75 empty Arab buses went to Amman, Transjordan to transport more Arab fighters to Palestine.

[Opposing sides faced each other at fantastically close quarters. In some cases Jews and Arabs have established defense points just down the hall from each other in the same apartment building.

[It is understood that at least half the walled city's 4000 Arabs have been evacuated. Jewish sources said the remaining 2000 were in a "serious strait for food."

[The Palestine government's post and telegraph department announced that "all insured services, whether within Palestine or to and from foreign countries, have been suspended until further notice." It was assumed this action was taken because terrified postal employes are working fewer hours and because of repeated mail thefts.]

$125,000 Goal

Funds Drive Set by Police Boys Club

The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will open its annual funds campaign next Monday, John A. Remon, president of the board of announced yesterday.

Simmons

A goal of $125,000 has been set up by campaign general chairman Robert C. Simmons, who is heading the drive for the second straight year. Simmons, first vice president of the Boys' Club, is vice president of Johns-Manville Sales Corp. and a former Touchdown Club president.

The club now has a membership of 13,000 boys, Simmons said, and "every man and woman who joins the organization makes it possible to take in more of the youngsters who are clamoring for the sports and companionship which the club offers."

Trinidad Boys Club Seeks To Make Up $4000 Reficit

The board of directors of the Trinidad Boys Club will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the club headquarters, 1119 Wylie st. ne., to further plans for making up a $4000 deficit in the club's operating budget.

The club's recent campaign for $10,000 realized only $6101.51. Adult memberships are offered to all adults for $1 or more, and membership cards will be issued to all who subscribe to the campaign. Dues should be mailed to the club headquarters.

fore police arrived at their apartment.]

Police said that if all 26 cases in the shipment contained TNT (tri-nitro-toluene) the total would be 65,000 pounds—enough to devastate a 100-square-mile area.

The explosive was discovered when a packing case broke open as it was being loaded aboard the American Export Line freighter Executor at a Jersey City pier.

The shipment was impounded, loaded on a barge and towed to Raritan Bay, off the New Jersey shore, to await inspection.

Fifty-one other cases destined for Palestine also were put on the barge when police said they found in one case machinery which could be used to make munitions.

A few hours later New York police and customs men raided a Bronx warehouse where police reported they found some material of a military nature.

The 26 crates believed to contain explosives were marked "used industrial machinery" and consigned to Haboreg, Ltd., of Tel Aviv. Customs officials said the export declaration listed the Oved Trading Co. of New York City as the consignor.

Police reported the raided warehouse was owned by Julius Chender of New York, and operated by the Machinery Processing and Converting Co. Police said Chender's parents believed he was in Paris.

Shipment of arms and ammunition to the Middle East was forbidden by the United States soon after the General Assembly voted to partition Palestine.

U. S. Consul to Return

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Richard S. Boyce, retiring United States consul general in Victoria, Australia, was scheduled to leave today for Washington, Radio Australia reported. Boyce, 51, is also retiring from the consular service after 27 years with the State Department.

Mother and Four Children Die As Home Is Destroyed by Fire

Midland, Mich., Jan. 4 (AP).—A mother and her four small children were burned to death early today in a fire which destroyed their home.

The victims were Mrs. Ethel Miller, 44; James, 8; Dorothy, 5; Margaret, 3, and John, 2.

Bertron Miller, 47, husband and father of the victims, is in Midland Hospital suffering severe burns.

Touched off by the explosion of an oil stove, the flames trapped the victims in the bedroom of the house.

First arrivals found Miller outside the burning home, throwing snow on his burns. Police had to restrain him from reentering the flaming home.

6 Hurt in Fire Crash

Philadelphia, Jan. 4 (AP).—A $100,000 predawn fire wrecked a downtown shop today and sent six persons to the hospital as an ambulance speeding to the blaze crashed into a taxicab.

The fire destroyed the Foley Dog Products Co. at 20th and Chestnut st. at 5 a. m. Two firemen were overcome battling the flames.

An emergency ambulance on the way to the fire and driven by Charles Buckenhorst, 38, collided with a taxicab operated by Leonard Soderman, 41.

Buckenhorst and four passengers of the cab were hospitalized.

Flames Destroy Synagogue

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—A four-alarm fire destroyed the interior of Mount Sinai Temple, a synagogue at 305 State st. in the downtown section of Brooklyn, early today.

"What this country amounts to depends on what happens to its homes." . . . The Robbins called up the RESERVES!

A true-to-life story of how to make less work for Mother, and help all the family have more fun...

by FRANCES PRESTON
Home Economics Consultant to the Family Service Association, Cleveland, Ohio

FRANCES PRESTON

THIRTY-FIVE beds to make ...1,000 pieces of china, glassware, and silver to wash . . . 175 pounds of food to prepare . . . 250 pieces of clothing to launder—that's the week's work for many mothers. It may take 14 hours a day, all 7 days!

If you haven't taken care of the children, and done all the housework and marketing single-handed, you can't have any idea of the amount of work that must be done around a house . . . Yet at my friends, the Robbins, things are different.

Mother was always tired

When the Robbins family (not their real names, of course) came to see us they were worried. Mrs. Robbins was always tired and cross, and seemed to be fast losing the pretty freshness she had when they were married. They were puzzled what to do; perhaps the housework wasn't divided fairly?

After only a few minutes' talk, the reason was easy to see: the Robbins, without realizing it, were making a pack horse out of Mother!

To the rescue! Mother needs the family's help...

We told them what we would tell every family: draw up a family work plan. It will not only help Mother, it will mean more fun for everyone.

Perhaps Dad can dry the dinner dishes: Sue can help with the marketing, or make the beds: Johnny can wash windows or run the vacuum cleaner when he gets home from school. Everybody can hang up clothes and keep things neat.

A family work plan can help save money, too. If Johnny is the family spot-remover, he also may look after his own clothes better. If Sue buys the food, she will also try not to waste it . . .

With the money saved and put aside, there will soon be enough on hand to buy a washing machine, or a sewing machine, or other work-savers that will help a lot.

A family work plan trains the children in household management. It clears free time, so all the family can have fun together. Mother gets time to catch her breath, think up something new and tasty for dinner, and pay more attention to her appearance. Not only is the home better managed, there's more love and companionship all around. Try it in your own family!

Family conferences always help!

How to PLAN for Family Happiness

• Planning ways of making housekeeping simpler and more economical is only part of sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money on hand when you need it, if you'll follow these few simple rules:

FOR TODAY . . . The first thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, insurance, mortgage and installment payments, etc. So start by adding up all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that amount weekly

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund equal to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much. When you have done that, you'll know how much you can spend for food, clothing, heat, light, amusements, and so forth.

FOR TOMORROW . . . We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change . . . living costs . . . taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program reviewed lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company. Institute of Life Insurance, 60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

3 Injured as Fire Breaks Out in Home

Woman Taken to Hospital, Other Two Treated at Scene

Three persons were injured one of whom was hospitalized in an early morning fire which broke out yesterday in a two-story brick residence at 3420 R st. nw.

Hospitalized, suffering from first and second degree burns and shock was Mrs. Henrietta Bromley, 49. Georgetown Hospital attaches last night said her condition was satisfactory. Given first aid at the fire scene were Mary Bromley, 18, who suffered burns to both hands, and Maragaret Hoover, who had slight burns on her face.

The fire, of undetermined origin, broke out in the living room of the home and a box alarm was sounded at 9:17 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire was discoverd by William Bromley, husband of Mrs. Henrietta Bromley, who was in the kitchen of the residence. He roused the rest of the family. Mrs. Bromley was rescued from her bedroom by her son, Earl Bromley. Seven pieces of fire apparatus responded to the alarm.

Meanwhile, merchants connected with the commercial building at 710 Eleventh st. nw. yesterday declined to estimate extent of the damage which the three-alarm fire there Saturday evening had caused, pending more complete investigation today.

Tenants of the building said yesterday they had not yet been permitted by firemen to enter the structure, and could not assay damage.

W. Earl Leese, one of the owners of the structure, said the building was valued at approximately $100,000. The building was partially covered by insurance, he added. No official report on cause of the blaze has been issued.

Blood Donor Unit Opens Here Today

The District of Columbia Red Cross Chapter will formally dedicate its new Blood Donor Center in the Chapter House, 1730 E st. nw., at 12:30 p. m. today.

Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan and general chairman of the 1948 Red Cross fund drive in Washington, will give the dedicatory address at the program, which will be broadcast over station WRC.

Grew will be introduced by John Clifford Folger, District Red Cross chairman, Rudolph M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve system board of governors and chairman of the blood donor recruitment center, will also speak.

The center hopes eventually to supply the entire 30,000 pints of blood needed, according to estimates, to supply all Washington demands. The blood will be obtained from unpaid donors, as was done in wartime, and likewise be furnished without charge.

The first group of volunteers will be 10 men from the Federal Bureau of Investigation at 10 a. m. today. They will draw names from a hat to see who will be the first to give blood at the new center, according to Mrs. Nita Russell, blood recruitment director.

Groups from the Department of Agriculture, American Red Cross and Capuchin College will also give blood donations today.

10% Freight Hike Means 25 Million To B & O in Year

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—The 10 per cent increase in freight revenue granted to railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission December 30 will amount to about 25 million dollars in additional income for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for 1948, B. & O. President Roy B. White estimated today.

This amount, he said, is based on the railroad's being allowed to continue the increase through the year. The ICC ruled the increase would be effective for six months, then review the case.

White said with this increase, the company will show only a 4 per cent operating income, while a minimum of 6 per cent was asked.

White said an additional one million dollars in revenues from the 25 per cent increase in mail rates would be realized.

With the new increases, he predicted the B. & O.'s operating income for 1948 would be about 40 million dollars and its net income about 18 milion dollars after deductions for Federal income taxes.

Minnesota Society Plans Winter Carnival Night

The Minnesota State Society of Washington yesterday announced plans for the annual "St. Paul Winter Carnival Night" to be held at 9 p. m. Saturday in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Maj. Gen. Carl H Gray, jr., newly appointed administrator of Veteran Affairs, will be honor guest and will appear in his official costume as King Boreas V. General Gray will bring greeting from St. Paulites, Inc., sponsors of the annual affair.

Mark McDonough, former St. Paul resident, is general chairman of the carnival committee. Minnesota members of Congress are expected to attend.

Members of the Minnesota State Society will be admitted free, while general admission for nonmembers is 1.50. Dress is optional.

Sweet Briar to Get Carter Glass Portrait

Sweet Briar, Va., Jan. 4.—A portrait of the late Senator Carter Glass will be presented to Sweet Briar College here at ceremonies at noon Thursday.

Painted by the late Stanley Grant Middleton in 1929, the portrait is a gift of the Senator's son, Carter Glass, jr., Lynchburg, and daughter, Mrs. John Boatwright of Danville. Senator Glass served as a member of the Board of Overseers of the college from 1927 until his death in 1946.

Obed C. Noll Heads Berkeley County Court

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 4.—Obed C. Noll was named president of the Berkeley County Court here at the annual organization session yesterday. A Democrat, he was first named to the court in 1942.

The court appointed E. Glenn Lewis, of Darkesville, as a deputy assessor to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of E. B. Ketterling of this city, on account of illness.

Upper Marlboro To Elect Town Commissioners

Voters of Upper Marlboro, Md., county seat of Prince Georges County, Md., will go to the polls today (town officials hope) to elect three town commissioners.

The three incumbents, G. Gardner Shugart, William T. Davis and Charles L. Wood, are not candidates to succeed themselves but probably will agree to serve if the voters write their names on the ballots.

An intensive effort last week to scare up candidates whose names could be placed on formal ballots was made without success. The town will continue its custom in effect since 1904 of just writing in three names. Usually the town folk just write in the names of the incumbents.

Polls will be open from 3 p. m. to 6 p. m. in the Marlboro firehouse. Wilbur Jones, Richard Sothoron and Montgomery Morrow are judges of election.

Appointed Chairman

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 4.—Jack E. Russell, Leesburg lawyer, has been appointed chairman for Loudoun County on the Virginia Committee National Service Fund of the Disabled American Veterans. Charles R. Fenwick, of Falls Church, is chairman for the Eighth District. The quota to be raised for Loudoun County in the campaign is $650.

Whitacre Heads Board

Winchester, Va., Jan. 4.—Landon B. Whiteacre, merchant and farmer of Whitacre, Va., has been elected chairman of the new Frederick County Board of Supervisors. The board decided to hold regular meetings on the second Monday of the month.

Compulsory Mediation Law Urged for Md.

Baltimore, January 4 (AP). — Joseph F. DiDominico, State labor commissioner, said today he was working on a proposed conciliation and mediation law.

The labor commissioner explained he believes it should be compulsory for an employer and a union in dispute to allow his office to attempt to mediate the argument.

"As it is now," DiDominico said, "I can only invite the two parties to let me sit in on sessions with them and recommend a settlement. Since there is nothing compulsory about it, most of the companies ignore my requests.

"Some of them even write back insulting letters.

"I don't say that my decision should be compulsory to a settlement, but I do believe that with an outside person sittting in officially as a mediator, his recommendations usually can lead to an agreement in a short period of time.

DiDominico said he would present his proposal to the legislative council for its consideration.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 4.—Loryn Crabill was re-elected captain of the Sarah Zane Fire Company last night for his twelfth term. The Charley Rouss Fire Company also organized for the year, naming Robert Legg president.

Virginia Man Named Chief Agronomist

By the United Press

Malcolm M. McVickar of Blacksburg, Va., has been named chief agronomist of the National Fertilizer Association, succeeding the late H. R. Smalley, it was announced today.

A graduate of Ohio State University, he now is employed as a soil scientist at the Virginia agricultural experiment station at Blacksburg.

Corn Found Useful For Medical Purposes

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—Corn—already one of the most versatile farm products—has found still another use, in the field of medicine.

According to the Virginia Agricultural Extension service, chemically processed corn starch may eventually replace the talcum surgeons use on their rubber gloves during operations. Researchers found that powder made from corn starch is easily absorbed by the body and if carried into an open wound will not cause lesions as regular talcum sometimes does.

Stover Named Garrett State's Attorney

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 4 (AP).—W. Dwight Stover, 27, has been appointed State's attorney for Garrett County, succeeding Walton W. Dawson, who resigned.

Dawson was elected in November, 1946, for a four-year term. In his letter of resignation he said he intended to devote full time to private practice.

What Is Your Answer?

1. CAN UNION OFFICIALS WHO REFUSE TO DISAVOW COMMUNISM REPRESENT WORKERS IN GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS?
2. SHOULD AN EMPLOYER NEGOTIATE WITH A UNION DISQUALIFIED BY THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD?
3. MUST EMPLOYEES BE THROWN OUT OF WORK AND GOVERNMENT WORKERS DEPRIVED OF FOOD SERVICE BECAUSE OF POLITICAL STRIKES?

To Our Patrons and the Public:

Essential food distribution provided by Government Services, Inc., to thousands of government employees is being interrupted by a strike of the United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, a branch of the United Public Workers-CIO. It is our solemn responsibility to our employees and our patrons to lay before the public the issues involved.

Government Services, Inc., has always been willing to sit down and negotiate with the REAL representatives of its employees. We have signed 11 contracts with unions representing our employees during the past nine years. We are willing today to negotiate with UPW-CIO or any other union that can win a representation election held in accordance with the law of the land under the supervision of the National Labor Relations Board.

Because of the many complaints received from loyal GSI employees, we have serious doubts that UPW-CIO can honestly represent itself as the voice of a majority of our workers. Our doubts are confirmed by the fact that fewer than one-fourth of our employees bother to attend UPW-CIO meetings.

In order to obtain a fair decision of the representation question, GSI requested that the Union comply with the law and submit to a secret election which will determine whether or not it represents a majority of the employees. Union officials bluntly refused our request and broke off further negotiations.

Government Services, Inc., was compelled, therefore, to petition the National Labor Relations Board for an election in which the employees themselves would have the opportunity to express their wishes. On December 31, 1947, the Board decided that UPW-CIO was not qualified to represent our employees in negotiations because Union officials did not file affidavits disavowing their connection with Communism and statements showing how they disposed of Union funds as required by the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947.

The refusal of Union officials to comply with the law of the land leads us to the inevitable conclusion that they are afraid to face a secret election because they do not represent a majority of our employees. To recognize such a Union would constitute a serious breach of trust to our workers as well as to our patrons.

Many of the leading officers of UPW-CIO have been closely identified with the Communist movement by official agencies of the Government. What other reason can there be for their stubborn refusal to comply with the anti-Communist requirements of the law? To recognize such officials as the spokesmen of our employees working in Government buildings would be shirking our responsibilities.

THE PRESENT DISRUPTION OF SERVICE BY THE UPW-CIO IS NOT OVER TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT BUT RESULTS FROM POLITICAL MOTIVES. The employment policies of GSI have been more liberal than those of the restaurant industry generally in rates of pay and other benefits. We have given the Union full security in the past by the compulsory check-off of Union dues from the wages of employees.

The strike—which is robbing hundreds of employees of their pay envelopes—is caused by the political interests of radical labor leaders who point blank refuse to dissociate themselves from a foreign ideology.

DESPITE THE DISRUPTIVE TACTICS OF UPW-CIO, GOVERNMENT SERVICES, INC., PUT INTO EFFECT A WAGE INCREASE FOR ALL OF ITS EMPLOYEES ON JANUARY 1, 1948, AND WILL PAY ALL LOYAL EMPLOYEES FOR THE NEW YEAR HOLIDAY.

The Board of Trustees,
GOVERNMENT SERVICES, INC.

Russians Yield Point on Jap Pact

Knowland Asks:

How Many Jap Plants Go to Reds?

By The Associated Press

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) demanded yesterday that the State Department disclose whether there is any secret Big Three agreement promising Russia a substantial portion of dismantled Japanese industrial plants.

Knowland wrote acting Secretary Robert A. Lovett asking for "information regarding commitments made to other nations as to reparations from the Japanese economy and where such agreements were made."

"I would like to have an overall figure of the total reparation amounts under consideration, together with the tentative breakdown of allocations to the USSR, China, Australia and any other countries considered possible recipients for reparations payments," Knowland said.

The Californian, who has protested vigorously against the shipment to Russia of dismantled German industrial plants, said he had reason to believe that some agreement may have been made at the Yalta, Tehran or Potsdam conferences to give the Soviets a "substantial" amount of similar equipment from Japan.

"If we are dismantling plants in Japan and furnishing the Russians with vital industrial materials and machinery there, in addition to what we have given them in Germany, we ought to have our heads examined," Knowland declared.

He added that if any secret agreement is turned up, he will lead efforts to have it voided. He has contended that German plant shipments to the Russians should be halted on the grounds the Soviets have violated other portions of the Potsdam agreement.

From other sources it was learned that approximately 1000 industrial plants in Japan have been marked for dismantling on the basis that they essentially were set up for war production.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced several months ago that about 30 per cent of the plants and equipment tabbed for reparations had been assembled and was ready for distribution to the Allies. It tentatively was agreed China should get half of this pool.

Russia, however, has blocked any final decision, protesting its percentage is too low.

Agree Other Nations Than Big Four May Aid in 'Preparation'

Moscow, Jan. 4 (NYHT).—Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov, in a note made public today, agreed to the participation of nations other than the Big Four in the preparation of a peace treaty for Japan.

But he did not relax his position that the treaty itself is the perogative of the Big Four (in this case the United States, the Soviet, Britain and China).

He suggested the other members of the Far Eastern Commission—France, The Netherlands, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and the Philippines—be permitted to participate in committees, subcommittees and in an information-consultation conference to assist the Council of Foreign Ministers. Moltov said this would be similar to the procedure for the preparation of a peace treaty for Germany.

Preliminary Meeting Favored

In this note, Molotov adhered to an earlier Soviet proposal that the Big Four hold a preliminary conference in China this month.

Molotov's note, dated December 13, was sent to the Chinese government in reply to the latter's views on the Soviet proposal for the preliminary meeting this month. While China agreed to this meeting if the United States and Britain accept, it rejected the Soviet view that preparation of the peace treaty with Japan should be the prerogative of the Council of Foreign Ministers instead of the eleven nations on the Far Eastern Commission.

The Soviet note, published today, contested a Chinese statement that the Potsdam agreement contained no clearly expressed declaration investing the Council with authority to prepare a peace treaty with Japan. Molotov cited a passage in the Potsdam agreement that the Council prepare a peace settlement and insisted this made no exceptions.

Potsdam Pact Disputed

The dispute arises over whether Potsdam gave the Council power to prepare peace treaties with both Germany and Japan, as Molotov insists it does, or only with Germany, as the other powers contend. The latter maintain the Far Eastern commission is the agency concerned with the Japanese treaty.

Molotov again rejected this view in the Soviet note to China, copies of which were also sent to the United States and Britain as interested powers. The Moscow agreement of 1945 creating the Far Eastern Commission, said Molotov, did not confer on the commission functions involving a peace settlement. On the contrary, he continued, it specifically provided the commission not engage in territorial questions.

From this, Molotov argued that the peace treaty be prepared by the four members of the Council of Foreign Ministers which signed the surrender terms with Japan—the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Britain. However, he was willing to recognize the interests of the other states on the Far Eastern commission. He, therefore, proposed that these states be admitted into the committees, subcommittees and the information-consultation parley.

Dutch Colonies Seek Interim Government

Batavia, Java, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Netherlands Indies government said today that representatives of eight Dutch-controlled areas had petitioned for immediate formation of an interim government "for the preparation of the sovereign United States of Indonesia."

Implementation will be commenced immediately by Gov. Gen. Hubertus J. Van Mook.

Top republican representatives in Batavia flew to Jogjakarta to discuss with the republican cabinet the latest proposals to make effective the U. N. Security Council's cease-fire order.

To Delay Troops Recall

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (AP).—Australia has abandoned plans to recall its troops from Japan by next June because of expected delays in concluding the Japanese peace treaty, Radio Australia said today.

Philippines Need Aid, But Not to Fight Reds

Manila, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Philippine Republic needs American aid for a long-range industrial program but will not play up any communistic bugaboo to get it, Pio Pedrosa, commissioner of the budget, told a group of American overseas trade and reparations consultants today.

Republicans To Answer Democrats

CARROLL B. REECE

By the United Press

Republicans lined up their congressional leaders yesterday to give the country the GOP answer to Democratic demands for quick approval of the European recovery plan and President Truman's domestic anti-inflation program.

The Democrats issued a sweeping legislative challenge during their party's "radio rally" over the Mutual Broadcasting System last Friday night. The Republicans will reply tonight—just 13 hours before the regular Congress convenes Tuesday—over the same network at the same time given the opposition—10:30 to 11 p. m. E. S. T.

The Democratic rally featured talks by party leaders who happened at the time to be located in cities all the way from Paris to Los Angeles. The Republicans will all speak from a "round-table" in Washington.

GOP National Chairman Carroll Reece will be rally chairman. Speakers will include Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, a leading contender for the 1948 Republican presidential nomination; House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts; House majority Leader Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, and Senator Eugene D. Millikin, of Colorado, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

With this line-up, the Republicans will not only be prepared to talk about the two top political issues raised by the opposition; they also will be in a position to make a few demands of their own, chiefly for Presidential approval of an income tax cut early in the new session of Congress.

Martin already has given notice that the House probably will approve a third income tax cut bill before February 1, but the extent of the proposed reduction is still being debated.

DuPont to Sell Own Anti-Knock Compound

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 4 (AP).—E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. announces it has entered into competition with the Ethyl Corp. of New York in the selling of tetraethyl antiknock compound for gasoline to the oil refining industry.

The company said this was made possible by the expiration with the new year of the last of the basic patents held by the Ethyl Corp.

Since 1923 duPont has manufactured the compound for the Ethyl Corp., which then marketed it to the oil refineries. Now duPont will sell its own product.

Dinah Shore has Child

Hollywood, Jan. 4 (AP).—Singer Dinah Shore and her husband, Actor George Montgomery, today became parents of a 7-pound baby girl.

Communists Blow Up Bridge in Manchuria

Peiping, Jan. 4 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist dispatches said today Communists had blown up a big railroad bridge across the Liuku River in southwest Manchuria, delaying for many weeks any prospect of restoring rail traffic between Peiping and Mukden.

Most military action in Manchuria was said to be centered in the south, with government troops moving to reinforce Chinhsien, 80 miles above the destroyed bridge, after having beaten off Communist attacks on Sinlitun, 70 miles west of Mukden.

A government report from Mukden said the First and Sixth Armies both American-trained veterans of the Burma campaign in World War II, had been consolidated as the new Seventh Army.

This was taken by Peiping observes as an indirect indication that the two armes had suffered heavy losses. The first had been garrisoning Changchun, Manchurian capital, while the sixth was in Mukden.

(The extreme rightist newspaper Ta Kang Pao said in Nanking that Gen. Lin Piao, Communist commander in Manchuria, and Li Li-san, Communist political leader there, had opened discussions with the Russian Far Eastern army command on exchange of Russian arms for Manchurian commodities.

In North China, pro-Nationalist press dispatches said government troops were conducting "sweeping warfare" against 20,000 Communists who last week attacked Paoting, 90 miles southwest of Peiping, but no details were given.

Airways Reports Loss

London, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC) lost 60 pounds ($240) for each passenger carried in 1946-47, the Sunday Express reported today.

From April 1, 1946, to March 31, 1947, BOAC lost 32 million dollars for about 130,000 passengers carried.

Japan Working on Program To Quadruple Exports by '51

Tokyo, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Japanese government is preparing a five-year economic program based on the hope Japan can begin exporting more than one billion dollars worth of goods a year by 1951.

This is four times the present exports.

United States occupation officials consider the long-range goal attainable at the current rate of economic improvement.

Press reports of the plan said imports would increase annually, so that Japan's unfavorable trade balance would continue through 1952.

The program for this year calls for 519 million dollars worth of exports and 781 million dollars worth of imports, mainly food and industrial raw materials.

Import Estimate Seen High

Occupation headquarters said the 1948 export target might be reached, but the import estimate was "high."

Kotaro Nagai, director of the Japanese Board of Trade, reported imports in 1947 of between 420 million dollars and 440 million dollars. Of this, 229 million dollars was for food and 91 million dollars for raw textile fibers.

Nagai said exports in 1947 were 270 million dollars, but other sources said the export total was 425 million dollars, including sale of wartime produced goods and settlement of old accounts.

The plan calls for exports totaling $1,395,000,000 and imports of $1,494,000,000 by 1952, thus approaching but not quite reaching a trade balance.

By the end of 1952, Japan would owe a total trade debt of $1,460,000,000, not counting several hundred million dollars already owed to the United States for food.

Population Estimate

Japanese experts estimate the population will exceed 82 million by 1952. The Japanese hope to raise their food production 15 per cent by 1952. Even then the Japanese expect to be importing 917 million dollars worth of food a year by 1952. This would include a million tons of sugar.

The Japanese plan to import 3,700,000 tons of coal a year.

Cotton imports are anticipated at 2,180,000 bales; wool, 640,000 bales, and scrap steel 974,000 tons.

With such raw materials the Japanese count on making finished goods to sell to all Oriental countries and to many western markets as well.

The American Way

AS WE ENTER into the new year of 1948, one fact becomes crystal-clear. Divine Providence certainly smiled kindly on us when we became Americans. Mathematically, our chances of being born in the United States were only one in sixteen. And all of us know that today, except in a few rare cases, the plight of the other fifteen-sixteenths is downright tragic.

Hunger, poverty and desperation stalk the earth. From all points of the compass, pleading eyes are turned to the United States in prayerful hope that out of our compassion and our generosity will come relief for those in dire need.

Certainly we cannot ignore these appeals to our humanitarian instincts. Therefore, through the principles of the Marshall Plan, we are considering ways to make up the deficit between what these people can produce themselves and their actual needs for the next few years. There can be no doubt that we have a definite responsibility to do everything within our power to help alleviate starvation wherever it occurs. But there are those among us who feel that some of the nations that are asking for help will come back again and again for more and more unless we insist that they rebuild on the sound foundation that to produce is to progress. Our contribution to world recovery should be essentially in the form of equipment and "know-how" and not in dollars and cents alone.

Some of the countries now asking for help were great powers long before the United States became an independent nation. Yet in the relatively short span of one hundred and seventy-one years, we have overcome their headstart of centuries and have become the most prosperous, the most powerful and the most successful nation on earth.

How did this happen? How was it possible for a poor, struggling former colony, made up of people of many nationalities, of many races and of many creeds to surpass in so short a time the long-established power and prestige of older nations?

Our American Heritage

The answer is four-fold. First, Mother Nature endowed us with tremendous resources. Second, we had no powerful neighbors to threaten our security. Third, we adopted at the start and developed down through the years a better system of government. And, fourth, we created an economic system which brought to us a better way of life.

We established a republican form of government. And we laid down the rules for its operation in a living document called the Constitution. We laid the cornerstone of a new economic system, based upon competitive free enterprise. The rules for its operation were recorded in the first ten amendments to the Constitution, which we call the Bill of Rights. In effect, we made it possible for every person to go as far as his will and his skill permit, provided that he does not deprive his fellowmen of this same right.

Yes, this is the land of opportunity, where such qualities of character as diligence, foresight and ability are much more vital to success than noble birth, tradition and force. Over here, America has sought to better the lot of all her people by fostering individual initiative through a system designed to produce a higher standard of living.

And so, it is no wonder that despairing people in other lands cast longing eyes at us and wish with all their hearts that they, too, had the material possessions, the political liberties and the sociological advantages which we Americans enjoy. But, apparently, it does not occur to some of them that the blueprints and formulas for their own salvation and prosperity are all clearly recorded in the pages of American history. Instead of adopting eagerly a system which has been proved successful, some of them waste their time and our money in futile experiments with doctrines which have failed miserably in the past and which, at best, promise only in the far-distant future a standard of living which we Americans already enjoy.

Doctrines of Despair

Today, Americans look at conditions in many other countries, where starvation, poverty and tyranny rule supreme, and they see nothing to be gained and much to be lost by changing to any other social doctrine. There are countries which call themselves democracies where a citizen may not own land or select his own job. He may not be tried by a jury of his peers. He may not stay away from work without good and sufficient reasons. He may not employ anyone to work for him. He does not have freedom of speech, freedom of assembly or freedom of religion and his press and radio are censored by his government.

The weekly wage of this same man will purchase eleven pounds of meat or forty quarts of milk. An American worker, with his weekly income can buy ninety-four pounds of meat or two hundred and sixty-three quarts of milk. Over there, it takes one hundred and four hours of work to buy a pair of shoes. Over here, it takes only seven hours. Over there, it takes two hundred and fifty hours of work to buy a wool dress. Over here, it takes only thirteen hours. Over here, one miner produces as much coal as four miners over there. With about the same number of acres under cultivation, the average American farmer turns out four and a half times as much as a farmer over there. Certainly these contrasts speak for themselves!

The complaints against the American system of competitive free enterprise frequently come from those who want to gain fame and fortune by sponsoring some new cause. They come from failures who do not have what it takes to succeed under our system and therefore want to change the system. They come from paid propagandists whose employers resent the fact that we have a successful system and want to wreck it so they can say "I told you so." And they come from visionaries who either ignore or hope to change the laws of human nature.

I do not mean to imply that we should be completely satisfied with things as they are. I sincerely hope that we never shall stop seeking improvements, for progress ends where smug satisfaction begins. None of us should delude himself that our way of life is perfect. But, fortunately, only a few starry-eyed fanatics and professional rabble-rousers want to destroy the edifice we have built and start all over again. Instead, most of us wisely advocate refinement, renovation and repair of the present structure.

Who Profits From American Business?

Many of the objections to our present system are based on fallacies. Let us examine a few of them. For half a century, soapbox orators, wily subversives and well-meaning but misled reformers have spread the completely erroneous idea that workers get the smallest share of the income which manufacturing produces and that the owners receive fabulous amounts. Actually, out of every dollar of sales made by a manufacturer, forty-seven cents go for materials and supplies, of which thirty-five to forty-five cents go to the workers who produce those materials. Nine cents go for taxes of which four cents are paid to government employees. Six cents go for depreciation, maintenance, repairs and interest; two cents for advertising, and one cent for research. That leaves thirty-five cents from the sales dollar of which the employees get twenty-nine cents. The remaining six cents are profit of which three cents are set aside for tomorrow's jobs by reserves to buy new machines and to expand plants. The remaining three cents are paid to stockholders, who are the owners of the machines, the tools and the factory buildings.

All told, approximately eighty-five cents out of every dollar of sales by manufacturers go for salaries and wages.

Stymied in that argument, the critics then turn their guns on the three cents that go to the owners. They give the impression that American business is owned by a mere handful of individuals. Here again they must face the facts. Actually, some fourteen million people own shares in American industry: workmen, teachers, grocers, bus drivers and many others who have saved and invested their money. These securities are much like promissory notes; receipts, if you will, for the money which the firms borrowed from these individuals and on which they attempt to pay interest in the form of dividends.

In addition to these direct owners of American business, there are fifty-four million who have life insurance policies, and fifty million who have savings accounts. All of these people are vitally interested in the successful operations and profits of American business, because the insurance companies and banks in which they have deposited their money have, in turn, reinvested most of these funds in the securities of American business.

Thus, it is apparent that the vast majority of our population receive direct or indirect benefits from American business.

Looking to the Future

The young men and women of today have before them opportunities greater than have existed since the beginning of time. Strangely enough, the word "opportunity" has no equivalent in some languages. To people who live under totalitarianism, however, this omission is not serious. They have little need for such a word. But it is a priceless word in the vocabulary of an American and it will become increasingly meaningful as time goes on.

Looking back along the road that Americans have traveled in the past, it may seem that so much has been accomplished that there may be a shortage of opportunities in the future. But when we glance along the road ahead, we realize that there are many more opportunities before us than there were in the years gone by.

Think of the many new inventions and discoveries of the last few years on which whole new industries are being built! Radar, atomic energy, electronics, synthetic chemistry, antibiotics, plastics and hundreds of other new and revolutionary developments are still in their infancy. The United Nations and the problems which that organization faces may well create wholly new and different fields of endeavor in finance, in sociology and in law.

A century ago, thousands of families left their homes east of the Alleghenies and braved the unknown wilderness in search of fortune. They knew before they started that thirst, hunger, exposure and savage enemies were obstacles which they would have to overcome before they could span the continent and reach their goals. Did these hardships stop them? Not for a minute! They knew that anything worth while can be gained only by taking risks, by hard work and by determination. Most Americans still believe in that creed. America is NOT getting soft. Like the hardy pioneers who defied the hazards of the trail, Americans know that you have to GIVE in order to GET.

Under our system of competitive free enterprise, to all who are willing to work, to think and to dare, the American Way brings rich rewards!

Dirksen's Misfortune

The misfortune which has impelled Representative Everett M. Dirksen to announce that he will not be a candidate for renomination in 1948 will arouse profound regret among a vast number of Americans. By dint of hard work, native intelligence and a commendable flexibility of mind, Mr. Dirksen has become one of the most powerful and highly esteemed leaders in the House of Representatives. In large measure he has achieved the happy feat of looking forward without losing touch with current realities. And his dynamic personality, his skill in debate and his habit of informing himself on every major public issue have given his influence a contagious quality.

The District of Columbia and the Sixteenth Congressional District of Illinois will be especially loath to lose the services of Mr. Dirksen. Since he first came to Congress in 1933 he has taken a keen interest in District affairs. His fights for fair and progressive legislation applicable to the Capital City have frequently been unsuccessful. But he has stood out as a tower of strength against the angry and uninformed waves of sentiment that sometimes sweep the House when District legislation is under debate. It is with his aid and sympathy, moreover, that the Auchincloss plan for home rule in the District has been worked out by a subcommittee of the House District Committee over which Mr. Dirksen presides.

In recent months Mr. Dirksen has given a large measure of his energy to support of the Marshall Plan. Touring Europe last fall to get a first-hand view of the recovery problem of that shattered continent, he went into the homes of the people, into the factories and business establishments. In Germany he talked with the people in their native language. He sought facts instead of broadcasting advice and came home a determined advocate of ample aid to insure the survival of freedom in the lands that we helped to rescue from Hitlerism. His idea of Government insurance to protect private American capital invested in new European enterprises against sudden nationalization of industries and to insure the conversion of profits from foreign currencies into dollars has found a definite place in the ERP recommendations sent to Congress by the President. We are glad that Mr. Dirksen will continue to be in the House for the momentous debate on the Marshall Plan and sincerely hope that the impairment of his sight at the early age of 52 will not make it necessary for him to terminate his public career.

Anglo-Russian Trade

After months of negotiation Great Britain and Russia have signed a trade agreement providing for shipments of 750,000 tons of coarse grains for livestock feeding to Britain during an eight-months period. To pay for this grain the British have agreed to deliver to Russia during the next two or three years various kinds of equipment, machinery, rails and so forth, for which Soviet trading organizations will place contracts with British manufacturers. Unless half these offsetting contracts have been negotiated by May 1, the Russians, with characteristic caution, reserve the right to withhold part of the promised feedstuffs. The agreement further provides for giving Russia access to various Empire products such as rubber, cocoa beans, and coffee.

The present short-term pact is merely a preliminary arrangement; discussions looking toward negotiation of a long-term trade agreement are scheduled to start next May, covering a wider range of goods. The British are especially anxious to obtain from Russia commodities such a wheat (not included in the short-term agreement), timber, woodpulp, paper, cotton and flax. Meantime the Russians have informed the British that they are ready to begin shipments of coarse grains at once, using their own ships if British vessels are not available.

This Anglo-Soviet trade agreement is an important step toward restoration of normal trading relations between eastern and western Europe. The Harriman Committee pointed out that a sharp division between the economies of these two areas would greatly increase the difficulties of restoring adequate levels of food production under the Marshall Plan. Hence to the extent that Russia consents to expand her trade with Great Britain and other countries of western Europe, she will be helping us to make a success of the Marshall Plan, despite her professed political antagonism toward that plan. And, of course, aid rendered by us under the Marshall Plan would benefit Russia by enabling the aided countries to build up their exports and exchange them for Russian surplus products.

One of the great contributions that the Marshall Plan can make to world peace grows out of the economic inducements it indirectly offers to Russia and her nonparticipating satellites to strengthen trading ties with their western neighbors. Once those trading relations are reestablished, we trust the way will be open for a settlement of political issues that are both a cause and a result of Europe's postwar economic distress. Judged from that viewpoint the signing of the Anglo-Soviet trade agreement is a hopeful augury.

Handicap To Freedom

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, says that plans for holding a meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions in this country next year have been blocked because of certain provisions of our immigration laws barring entry of alien anarchists and persons advocating the violent overthrow of the United States Government. The statutory prohibition also extends to individuals preaching the duty, necessity or propriety of assaulting or killing officers of the United States or any other organized government, advocating unlawful damage or destruction of property or sabotage. Aliens publishing, circulating or displaying written matter of similar import likewise fall under the exclusionist ban. Literally interpreted, these sweeping prohibitions would exclude a good many foreigners whom we honor for their courageous fight against oppressive governments.

Aliens who can prove to the satisfaction of the authorities that their offenses are purely political can get by the barriers. But that still leaves the Department of State free to deny visas to a good many persons advocating resort to force and violence as a means of overthrowing constituted governments. In fact, the department confirms Mr. Carey's charge that statutory restrictions on the granting of visas are responsible for the W. F. T. U.'s decision to hold its next congress in Brussels.

Despite these restrictive provisions of the immigration laws, we doubt whether Congress intended to apply to visitors the same sweeping tests used to disbar undesirable immigrants seeking permanent residence here. But if that was its intention, we think that the time has come to modify the law in our own interest. For the surest way to make headway against movements inimical to our form of government is to let their advocates see at first hand how our system works and what it has accomplished. We shall not make friends for democracy by a rigid screening process that excludes all observers except those whose views do not challenge the existing order.

The admission into the country of a few revolutionary spirits for a brief period certainly would do us no harm. If our Government could be undermined by such fleeting alien contacts it would be evidence that political disintegration had already done deadly work. As this newspaper pointed out recently, the efforts of the CIO to acquaint foreign labor groups with the purposes of the Marshall Plan deserve the appreciation and support of the Department of State and the American people. For the good will and understanding of labor groups in the countries we propose to aid is essential to the success of that plan. Yet, for the sake of excluding an alien fringe hostile to institutions that we cherish, we have lost an opportunity to welcome responsible labor leaders from other lands as delegates to the next world labor congress.

Dearer Capital

During the past year and a half the Department of Commerce reports that private outlays for construction and producers' equipment and the increased book value of business inventories absorbed about 55 billion dollars of investment capital. Somewhat less than two thirds of that tremendous volume of funds was supplied from corporate depreciation and other reserves and retained earnings. The remainder was obtained by selling new security issues to investors, direct investment of personal savings, loans from commercial banks, and sales of business holdings of Government securities.

Here is unmistakable evidence of a sharp expansion in demands for capital that has made heavy inroads on the liquid assets that were held by business concerns at the end of the war, and necessitated increasing resort to outside sources of capital supply to finance new projects. The demand for capital has been further increased by rising prices that have made it necessary to tie up more money in inventories. Expanding construction activity and the launching of new projects by State and municipal governments have also added to the demand for capital and have been reflected in extraordinarily large increases in new corporate issues and bank loans. The result has been a recent rise in the interest rates charged on new bank loans and long-term capital loans.

This advance in interest rates is a clear indication that the volume of funds available for investment is not keeping pace with demands for such funds. As a matter of fact, the great increase in commercial bank loans that has occurred during the past year and a half has been largely due to increased working capital needs that could not be met out of savings. Now that warning signals have been hoisted, in the form of higher interest charges for loans (accentuated by the recent action of the Federal Reserve authorities in lowering support prices for Government bonds), it is hoped that the pace of credit expansion will slacken. For a rise in bank loans results in additions to purchasing power that tend to raise prices. And the easier the terms on which such loans can be obtained, the greater becomes the inducement to rely upon this type of financing.

On the other hand, a rise in long-term interest rates on new security issues is an incentive to save more income for investment purposes. And saving should be encouraged because it is a noninflationary source of investment funds. For the man who saves reduces to that extent his own demands for consumer goods and services. It does not follow that all types of investment financed from bona fide savings are sound. For it is necessary under all conditions, and especially at the present time, for borrowers to observe caution when incurring new debt for expansion purposes. Moreover, in view of existing shortages of various basic industrial raw materials, investments designed to expand the producing capacity of some industries will necessarily be limited in scope, even if capital is available on reasonable terms for expansion purposes.

Lynchings In 1947

To the great credit of the South, lynchings declined from six in 1946 to one in 1947, according to the annual report on this foul business by the Tuskegee Institute. Since there was only one lynching in 1945 and two the year before, we are encouraged to hope that the disgusting record of 1946 was a temporary throwback due largely to postwar hysteria. If the happier trend of 1947 is projected into the current year, the United States will have no lynchings at all.

One other encouraging factor in the report is the prevention of lynchings in 31 different cases. In 24 of these cases officers of the law were responsible for the rescue of individuals from mobs bent on murder. Obviously the tide of public opinion that is running strong against this heinous offense has had a salutary effect. The decent people of the South, like those of the North and West, feel a sense of outrage and humiliation when mobs presume to mete out punishment to individuals for any purpose.

Let no one suppose, however, that mob action has been entirely suppressed. The fact that one victim survived after being left for dead by mobsters, that six borderline cases are still under study by Tuskegee, that 31 mobs were thwarted, and that the one unmistakable lynching at Greenville, S. C., was an especially horrible affair ought to dispel any feeling of complacency. One lynching—indeed, one attempt at lynching—is too many. But the law is making a slow triumph, and this newspaper is pleased to commend that progress.

Freight Rate Increase

The 10 per cent interim increase in railway freight rates permitted by the ICC follows a similar increase of last October, thus raising rates 20 per cent above pre-October levels—or 17½ per cent, if allowance is made for certain special exemptions. The additional temporary increase in rates has been granted to enable the carriers "to meet increased costs for wages and materials, and to give them net earnings to carry out the national transportation policy announced by Congress in 1940." The public as well as the Government has an interest in seeing that the rate structure permits the railroads to maintain healthy financial conditions essential to the performance of necessary public services.

The carriers are greatly encouraged by the promptitude with which the ICC has responded to their appeals in giving them immediate partial relief from the dual pressure of rapidly rising operating costs and insufficient rate adjustments. In the past, long and costly delays in handing down decisions have subjected the ICC to deserved criticism. Evidence that it has taken this criticism to heart and reformed its ways encourages the belief that in future rate adjustments will be more timely. There is also reason to hope that the ICC will allow further increases in rates when it reaches its final decision on the roads' pending application for permanent increases averaging 30 per cent for the country as a whole.

Meat Rationing

Believing that a critical meat shortage impends, Secretary Anderson is doing all that he can to be ready for the emergency by instructing Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan to formulate a rationing program. Senator Flanders, who is convinced that compulsory meat rationing will be necessary, is prepared to take the next essential step by introducing a bill empowering the Department of Agriculture to make preliminary plans for rationing. However, the Flanders bill would not give the Department of Agriculture discretionary authority to institute rationing. To put rationing plans into effect Congress would have to pass a second bill to be introduced when or if the meat supply situation becomes acute.

A procedure of this kind seems to us thoroughly unsatisfactory. For unless a majority of the members of Congress are reasonably sure that rationing is inevitable, Senator Flanders' preliminary bill is likely to be rejected. If a majority are convinced that the situation is critical, there is no good reason for delaying action on legislation authorizing rationing. The time to debate this major issue is now, leaving it to the Government experts to decide when to act. Otherwise Congress may be called upon to pass rationing legislation after the crisis is upon us.

Grain Gambling

Many newsmen designated as "speculating in grain" what President Truman properly calls "grain gambling." Trading in wheat futures is not speculating in wheat; it is gambling on fluctuations of wheat prices—otherwise known as "gambling in the necessities of life."

Speculators, using the term in its proper sense, buy something in expectation of a quick profit on resale. Nothing at all is bought in the wheat futures market, except a chance on price changes. The terms "buy" and "sell," as used in the futures market, do not mean buy and sell in the customary meaning of these terms. They merely indicate to the futures broker what sort of entries to make in his customers' accounts—whether the bets are to be recorded on the "long" side or the "short" side of the account.

When a customer enters the wheat futures market on the long side (buying wheat futures) he needs to make the "round turn" (selling wheat futures)—maybe the same day, maybe later—in order to determine whether he has won or lost, and how much.

Mere buying or mere selling futures does not constitute the complete transaction, as it would if something were being actually bought or sold. If one should enter the futures market on the short side (selling futures) he would need to make the "round turn" (buying futures) in order to complete the transaction and to determine whether he had won or lost, and how much.

This is nothing but gambling on price changes; it is not speculation.

The unfortunate physician who played the wheat futures market, and begged Secretary Anderson not to publish his name, is doubtless conscious of the fact that he was not investing or speculating in wheat, but was merely gambling on price fluctuations.

"Wallace's Blind Alley"

Your editorial of December 31, "Wallace's Blind Alley" appears to be in line with the prevailing malady which has beset the press of the Nation, liberal and conservative alike.

While I hold no brief for Mr. Wallace's latest effort in launching a third party movement for the Presidency, I feel that your editorial is so slanted as to avoid certain important points which have been developed by Mr. Wallace, despite his "messianic complex" and his entanglement "in confusion and contradictions."

You raise the question "Is it possible that he doesn't know that the Administration has exhausted every device known to diplomacy in trying to bring about an understanding with the Russians?" In that connection, I would like to point out that many people throughout the country (a minority indeed, but how many people usually give very much thought to these matters?) are not so certain that the employment of "every device known to diplomacy" is the most effective for achieving peace. A number of people with whom I have discussed our foreign policy recently have expressed their uncertainty as to who started to race who in what direction as soon as major hostilities terminated.

With respect to Wallace's criticism of the Marshall Plan, you fail to even mention in your editorial his alternative proposal. You will note that while he opposed the partisan aspects of singular aid by the United States to the needy nations of Europe, he advocates equivalent aid through the United Nations. He undoubtedly has considered the discussions which preceeded the establishment of UNRRA and the World Bank.

While I recognize the importance of suporting the Marshall Plan in the absence of a plan involving international cooperation, I am of the opinion that to insure the success of the United Nations we must do more than give it lip service. We must, notwithstanding apparent complications, make it the vehicle with which we approach and solve world problems, including aid to wartorn peoples and rehabilitation of weakened nations.

We cannot afford to place the United States in the position of the banker who makes a loan to a small businessman with the express stipulation that the little business must be operated to the banker's satisfaction. To do so is to invite further charges of economic and political imperialism from our adversaries and tacit admissions of such condemnations by our friends.

Landis Ouster

The President's decision not to reappoint James M. Landis as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board is just an additional instance where the President has failed to support an outstanding Government official who has the public welfare at heart, and the intelligence to protect it. This action cannot fail to further discourage participation in the present Administration by persons whom the public have come to respect as devoted to their interests. J. W. R.

Basis For Aid

The economic condition of practically all war-torn countries is so deplorable, according to some supposed-to-know-all political and business leaders, who I trust are not only honest politicians, but also trustworthy businessmen, that we cannot afford to deny continuous aid to Europe short of permanent injury to our national well being.

I am not sure, as others seem to be, that we can, or should continue to give food, raw materials and machinery to tide Europe over what is regarded as an emergency, which we are told will last several years. Europe has always been, unless my memory is not steadfast, in a state of emergency, either as the result of war or a depression.

If all the assistance we have given and also that which will likely follow—will be of no permanent value to either Europe or ourselves unless Europe rids itself of socialism, communism and all other isms which make to hinder democratic reconstruction. There is ample evidence, moreover, that we have already given till it hurts. For instance, look at our American dollar, which is worth about 50 cents. I grant there are more of them than ever before, but, like the old gray mare, they ain't what they used to be. The flow of goods abroad has resulted in a continuing tendency toward higher prices on the domestic market.

Europe should now be strong enough, it would seem, in view of all we have given, to stand up and work. If the emergency in Europe is as great as it is said to be, then, in order to make it easier to give the necessary help, the Government must use a strong hand against the monopolists to bring about lower prices and also speed up mass production.

International Control Of The Ruhr

The failure of the Council of Foreign Ministers to reach an agreement on a common program for postwar Germany must not be allowed to become the occasion for German rejoicing.

Undoubtedly, the vast majority of Germans hope that our present disagreements with the Russians will turn to their benefit. They are pinning their hopes on the Germany Firsters, who are working overtime to preserve Germany's industrial war potential, and eventually to return to German control and ownership Germany's war arsenal—the Ruhr.

The Society for the Prevention of World War III, Inc., is confident that it speaks for the overwhelming majority of Germany's victims, including our own heroes, when it calls upon our Government to take the leadership in establishing international control and ownership of the Ruhr. We believe that this is the sine qua non for prosperity in Europe and security for ourselves.

It is well-known that the Ruhr is important for Europe's economy. It is well-known that the Germans, who have been in control of that region, have employed it to further their plans of aggression. It is also well-known that without the war potential of the Ruhr, Germany could never have launched World War II.

The Ruhr has not only been used by the Germans as their industrial base for war, but it also has been employed as their supreme economic weapon against the economic and political independence of her neighbors. Through a maze of cartel networks in coal, steel, chemicals and machine tool industries, the Germans have, time and again, strangled the economy of their prospective victims. Therefore, so long as the Ruhr remains in the control of Germany's industrial war lords, American plans for the rehabilitation of Europe will be built on quicksand.

Thus, for economic reasons, as well as our own future security, we strongly urge that the United States propose the internationalization of the Ruhr, thereby providing for the use of its productive capacity by all of Europe and preventing its use by Germany for aggression.

Toward fulfilling this basic need, we propose the following:

(a) That the ownership of the coal, steel and chemical industries in the Ruhr and Rhineland be vested in an international consortium;

(b) That this consortium take over all of Germany's coal, steel and chemical resources in the Ruhr and Rhineland from private or public ownership, and fix the amount of compensation, if any, to those private and/or public owners;

(c) That the consortium set up a commission to administer the resources of the Ruhr; all decisions to be taken by a majority vote;

(d) That the management of these coal, steel and chemical resources shall consist of reliable personnel appointed by the commission;

(e) That the commission allocate all coal and steel production in the Ruhr and Rhineland on a percentage basis to the various nations requiring this coal and steel, as well as to Germany itself.

(f) That the victims of German aggression shall be given preference in the purchase of such coal and steel.

The internationalization of the Ruhr, coupled with the prompt delivery to Germany's victims of more coal and of all surplus German industrial plants will go a long way towards saving the taxpayers' money and accelerate Europe's recovery.

We believe that this program will be the most effective answer to those who allege that our plan for the recovery of Europe is a facade behind which the German powerhouse will be reinvigorated. Furthermore, we know that this program will be greeted by all of Germany's victims and enhance the prestige of the United States in the eyes of all freedom loving peoples.

Of Civil Liberties

By Ernest Lindley

Justice Douglas' View

A SIGNIFICANT SPEECH was delivered last week by Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court. The occasion was a dinner in Chicago commemorating the 100th anniversary of the birth of John Peter Altgeld, militantly liberal Governor of Illinois who pardoned three anarchists found guilty in the Haymarket riots, on the ground that they had not received a fair trial.

Justice Douglas pointedly stated that Altgeld's philosophy is "relevant" to a "current problem," adding: "On the domestic scene his courage and steadfastness of purpose are needed for protection of the civil liberties of our people."

AMONG MANY STRONG passages in an exceptionally forceful speech, the following, on civil liberties, are perhaps especially worth attention:

"When Altgeld insisted that even anarchists were entitled to due process of law, he himself was labelled a subversive influence. That will often be said today when one insists that the safeguards of the Bill of Rights be extended to all groups, including any minority group in our midst that may be at the whipping post or the subject of temporary hysteria.

"Yes, it takes courage to stand between an unpopular minority and the community, insisting that our Bill of Rights was designed for the protection of all people whatever their race, creed, or political faith.

"But those who are devoted to the democratic ideal expressed in our Bill of Rights will take the direct and daring course. Once they are sure of their facts and know they are doing right they will, like Altgeld, espouse the cause of the victims of ignorance, prejudice, or passion. They, too, many be pilloried or cursed. But institutions become great by the greatness of the men who champion them, by the greatness of the advocacy that defends them. A people indifferent to their civil liberties do not deserve to keep them, and in this revolutionary age may not be expected to keep them long. A people who proclaim their civil liberties, but extend them only to preferred groups start down the path to totalitarianism. They emulate either the dictatorship of the right or the dictatorship of the left. In doing this they erase a basic distinction between our system of government and totalitarianism.

"To allow that to happen is to lose by default."

WHEN THEY MAKE speeches, Justices of the Supreme Court usually avoid matters of sharp current controversy, especially those which are generating litigation which will come before the court. Justice Douglas can hardly be held to have breached the custom, since he affirmed fundamental principles of the Constitution, which he is sworn to uphold and made no attempt to apply them in specific cases on which the Court may have to pass in the future. But the extraordinary vigor of his language, and his allusions to fears of being misunderstood or of alienating clients which restrain others from standing firmly behind the Bill of Rights, reflect deep concern over the tendency to short- or undercut civil liberties in the treatment of the Communists.

Justice Douglas also recalled approvingly Altgeld's aggressive efforts in behalf of the rights of labor and for social justice generally. He summed up this part of Altgeld's philosophy in this way:

"Altgeld placed human beings higher than the dollar in the national scale of values. A nation's industrial plant represents not only the daring of capital and the imagination of executives, but the blood and sweat of men. The men and women who compose a nation are its greatest natural resource—greater than its mines or forests or rivers. The nation is healthy only if its people are strong. The state must concern itself with their economic disasters. For the greater share of their troubles are due not to laziness but to economic forces beyond their control. There is in most men a lively sense of decency, of good will, of fraternity. The poor have those instincts, as well as those blessed with more worldly goods. The powers of government should be directed to protect them in their struggle to survive and in their efforts to live in dignity and to share the fruits of freedom."

ALTHOUGH ALTGELD would have approved this interpretation of his views, the words were Douglas' and express his own philosophy. Such ringing progressive declarations are seldom heard these days from high places in Washington. Although it may have been far from Justice Douglas' intention, this speech will inevitably stimulate consideration of him for the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

Chinese Restrictions

The Washington Post has consistently taken the position that the government of China is a dictatorship, is oppressing the people, and is suppressing freedom. Yet, on December 26, The Washington Post published an anti-Chiang editorial from the Shanghai Evening Post.

How do you explain that?

Editor's Note: It so happens that the day this letter arrived, the American-owned Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury had protested successfully against a 50 per cent reduction in its newsprint allotment. The protest had to be made to the State Department.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

We Are Over-Extended

Lippmann

NEVER MORE than in the next six months while Congress is in session will so much depend on whether practical judgment is to be the master of our fears and our wishes. Practical judgment is first of all the act of comparing what this country can do with what if it were not opposed, or if it were omnipotent, it would be desirable to do. It will be obvious that it is impossible to do everything for which a strong, even a compelling, case can be made. Practical judgment then consists in choosing to what ends the available limited means shall be applied.

It is the principles of practical judgment which distinguish common sense from hysteria, and statesmanship from agitation, and national commitments which can be realized from entanglements which end in bankruptcy.

THE NECESSITY for practical judgment confronts us now because the claims upon our resources, our military power, influence, and competence are now excessive. They cannot all be met. The total will have to be reduced. The question as a matter of fact will be whether the total claims are to be reduced crudely and without a plan by Mr. Taft and Mr. Taber, who will look at the budget but not at the high national interest, or whether they will be reduced by selection on the considered decision of Mr. Marshall, Mr. Forrestal, Mr. Snyder and Mr. Harriman.

I think it is fair to name these four principal Cabinet officers as the men who must in agreement make the decisions, with the President's approval, which will bring into balance our responsibilities and our over-all resources, our commitments and our power, our means and our ends.

THE LIMITING factor in making this decision is that the productive capacity of this country is now fully employed and cannot be expanded very much very rapidly. In the primary components of national wealth, in food, in raw materials, in steel, and in transportation, there is, of course, room for greater efficiency, harder work, better management, and productive investment. But for the practical purposes of those who make national policy the net improvement possible quickly is negligible as compared with the immense totals. There is not now, as there was in 1940, a very large reserve of unused facilities and unemployed labor.

Against these inelastic resources we must measure the claims. First and foremost are the huge deferred claims, the unspent purchasing power, accumulated by individuals and corporations during the war. This is the domestic inflation. It is, moreover, of a kind which is creating more inflation, and could potentially through the expansion of bank credit create almost unlimited inflation. If this inflation is not checked drastically and resolutely by taxation, a budgetary surplus, and by monetary restriction, it can devour all the means which we must find to maintain our military security and to support our foreign policy.

If the Democrats and the Republicans cannot agree on an anti-inflationary policy, the Kremlin will not have miscalculated when it holds that a domestic crisis in the United States will change the world situation in their favor. But the Democrats and the Republicans will not agree, and the real issue will be lost in cheap politics, if the Administration does not concentrate its effort on checking the cause of inflation rather than on demagogic palliatives to deal with the high prices which are only the effects of inflation.

THE INFLATED claims of American consumers and of American business enterprise upon our limited resources are in competition with many other claims. The two principal ones come from the armed forces and the State Department. Here decisions of high policy will have to be taken. For it will be impossible at one and the same time to find the funds for a strategic Air Force, a Navy which commands all the oceans, a ground Army based on universal service, research and development of new revolutionary weapons, the Marshall Plan for western Europe, the occupation and reconstruction of enemy territory, the support of Greece, Turkey, Iran, the Arab states, and China, and our implied obligations under the Good Neighbor policy.

We are morally and politically over-extended. Decisive choices, each of which involves sacrifice, risk, losses, and deep misgiving are, therefore, unavoidable. We are at a point where the Truman Administration cannot please all the services, all the departments, all the specialized divisions of the State Department, all the countries to which by its unconsidered and no doubt well intentioned declarations it is morally committed.

THE PROCESS of deflation is an exceedingly painful process, especially for a democracy, especially in an election year. But we can no more avoid it than could the Russians, who have deflated themselves brutally but effectively, or than the British who are struggling with it, or the French who are face to face with the imperative need for it. Our margins of safety are greater than those of any other great power. But our commitments and our obligations are also greater, and the necessity of making both ends meet is now squarely before us.

We shall have to have from Secretary Forrestal a decision, as is required under the new military legislation, on how our military investment is to be allocated. We shall have to have from Secretary Marshall judgments as to where on the great globe our diplomatic effort is to be concentrated and pushed forward decisively. And in the presence of these decisions we shall have to concentrate our attention, refusing to let it be dispersed all over the surface of the earth. For the earth is much too large, and its troubles and disorders much too extensive, for us to regard ourselves as the ultimate fixers of everything everywhere.

Matter Of Fact

The Choice In Greece

IF ANY FURTHER proof is needed that the world is now in the zone of war, it is only necessary to consider the possible American response to a Soviet recognition of the "government" of Gen. Markos Vifiades. Already, of course, the Markos drive on Greece is based squarely on support from the Soviet satellites. The main military base for the Communist general's unsuccessful drive on Konitsa was across the Albanian border 5 miles away. His propaganda broadcasts, it has been learned, emanated from a mobile railway car across the Yugoslav frontier. But this sort of thing is still unofficial, unadmitted.

The Soviet bloc is thus, as yet not finally committed. But the expected official recognition of the Markos regime will commit the Soviets to open aggression against the Greek government. The nature of the decision with which such a Soviet challenge will confront the United States can be understood from the fact that one response now being considered is the establishment of a great Anglo-American base in the southern Mediterranean.

Three main alternative courses of action will in fact be open to the United States if the Soviet bloc recognizes and gives armed support to the Markos government. These three alternatives are now being anxiously debated by the American policy makers.

THE FIRST is simply more of the same—more aid to the Greek government, with added emphasis on building up the Greek military forces. It is argued that if the Greek army were enlarged from its present strength of 150,000 to its wartime strength of 400,000 men, and if it were completely equipped with American arms, the Greeks would then be able to withstand on their own anything short of an open all-out Soviet-sponsored assault. On the other hand, such an army would constitute an intolerable drain on Greek manpower, and on the inflation-riddled Greek economy. Greek economic stability, without which Greek political stability is impossible, would be indefinitely delayed.

The second alternative is to send American troops to Greece. Both Greek Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris, on his visit to Washington, and Greek Ambassador Vassili Dendramis are believed unofficially to have requested American troops. There is some support for this proposal both in the State Department and in the Pentagon Building. It is argued that to send even a regimental combat team of 4000 men would serve to stiffen the backs of the Greeks and would be a token of American determination to thwart the Soviet push south.

Yet there appears to be a growing body of opinion that to commit American troops to Greece would be merely to fall into a trap designed by the politburo. A small force would be useless, except for morale purposes. A few thousand Americans could not crush the guerillas where 150,000 Greeks have failed, and as soon as this became clear any morale value from the presence of American troops in Greece would disappear. The only really effective American military action in Greece would be the sealing off of the Greek borders. If this could be done at all, it would require several divisions. Thus an important segment of American military force would be concentrated on one small point on the Soviet perimeters, leaving the Soviets free to shift their main expansionist drive elsewhere; to Italy or Persia, or to Austria, or to Turkey.

THAT IS WHY an entirely new approach to the problem of containing the Soviet push south is being seriously considered, both in Washington and in London. This approach would call for an all-out effort, both in the United Nations and through normal diplomatic channels, to persuade the Kremlin that its Greek game is not worth the candle. It would be made clear to the Kremlin that the end result of an intensified drive on Greece would be the establishment of a great Anglo-American military base within striking distance of the whole Soviet zone. Such a base might be in the Bengaui region in Africa, now held by the British by right of conquest. This possibility might cause the rulers in the Kremlin to think twice, since the establishment of such an Anglo-American base would certainly be vastly unwelcome to them.

Yet it is argued that if persuasion failed, such a base would provide precisely what American troops in Greece would not provide. It would provide the capacity to bring counterpressure to bear, not merely at one point on the Soviet perimeter, but wherever a Soviet-sponsored push outward from the Soviet zone occurred.

These are the broad outlines of the main alternatives which the American policy makers are now debating. Of course, the final decision may call for combining two or more of these alternatives—possibly the Greek army will be strengthened, while the establishment of an American base is held as an ace in the hole. The one alternative which is not being considered is a total American withdrawal from Greece, for the consequences of such a withdrawal are entirely predictable. Resistance to Soviet expansion all around the Soviet perimeters would immediately become mushy, and further Soviet expansion both into the Middle East and into Austria and Italy would only be a matter of time.

Congregations Urged to Set 1948 Goals

On the first Sunday of a new year clergymen yesterday urged worshipers to set spiritual goals for 1948.

The Rev. Charles B. Austin, marking his silver jubilee as pastor of West Washington Baptist Church, 31st and N sts. nw., urged his flock to put Christ first in home, school, business and country.

Mr. Austin asked his congregation to "make a pledge for 1948 that would embody a strong faith in the eternal Christ and obedience to his marching orders."

'Learn to Face Life'

The need of facing life with Christian courage was emphasized by Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

"Real happiness comes in learning to face life, instead of running away from it," he declared, and deplored that "some folks physically and mentally run away from life, many through becoming alcoholics."

'Goal of Achievement'

"It would be well for us to select some goal of achievement for this year which would help us make definite progress in our Christian lives," Dr. Henry W. Snyder declared at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut ave. and Everett st. nw.

Doctor Snyder admonished his flock to follow the example of St. Paul, "who had a goal in life, and who was always trying to improve himself and his program."

In Writing Plays

Shakespeare Had Aides, 'Spirits' Say

London, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Drama critic Percy Allen reported today he had contacted William Shakespeare, the Earl of Oxford and Sir Francis Bacon in the spirit world and had asked them bluntly:

"Who wrote the plays attributed to William Shakespeare?"

Shakespeare admitted he was not the sole author of his famous plays and poems and that Edward de Vere, seventeenth Earl of Oxford, was his collaborator, Allen said.

On the basis of these reported "conversations," Allen contends he has conclusive proof that Oxford and Shakespeare definitely worked together.

For a century learned groups have backed various Elizabethan noblemen and writers as actual authors or part authors of Shakespeare's works.

Ex-Sky Pilot of 101st Airborne Organizes Ecumenical Church

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

A young Army chaplain saw his "boys" fight and die in Normandy and Bastogne—not as Baptists or Methodists—but as human beings.

Now this former 101st Airborne Divison skypilot, inspired by his war experiences, has a congregation whose membershp transcends sectarian and denominational boundaries. It is what is commonly known today as an "ecumenical" church.

The Rev. Newton Gordon Cosby and his flock met yesterday at twilight in the stone residence at 1707 19th st. nw., bought last May for $27,500. The 30-year-old former pastor of the Ballston (Va.) Baptist Church stood before a small, candle-lit altar in a second-floor chapel and prayed that world brotherhood might become a reality.

The service at the Church of Our Savior was as unpretentious as Pastor Cosby himself. His wife, wearing a black gown, softly played hymns and the congregation sang, read responses and prayed, and heard Pastor Cosby introduce the speaker—Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University.

"We are living in an age where the promise of hope stands side by side with the threat of violence," said Dr. Douglass. After the service, there was coffee for the worshipers.

Before the service, Pastor Cosby sat in what he calls the "Ecumenical Room" on the first floor and described the aims of the Church of Our Saviour. The room, by the way, is adorned with wall murals depicting scenes in Holland, Russia and other lands, symbolizing the ecumenicity of Christianity.

Because Mr. Cosby feels there is a lack of "literate Protestants," prospective members of his church must spend six months' study of Christian beliefs before joining.

"We feel there must be adequate spiritual preparation for much of the social service work in our congregation," she said. "We don't want to go to one extreme or the other, but rather to strike a happy balance between Christian worship and action."

The church's program calls for much institutional work. So Miss Elizabeth Ann Campbell soon will become executive director of a medical social service department of the congregation. She is the daughter of Dr. Ernest F. Campbell, pastor of Alexandria's First Baptist Church, and Mrs. Campbell, parents-in-law of Pastor Cosby. Miss Ellen Wimberly, a former Wasp, will become director of recreation and social activity, especially for the young people.

Mr. Cosby was graduated from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., in 1942, serving at Ballston until June, 1943, when he became a chaplain.

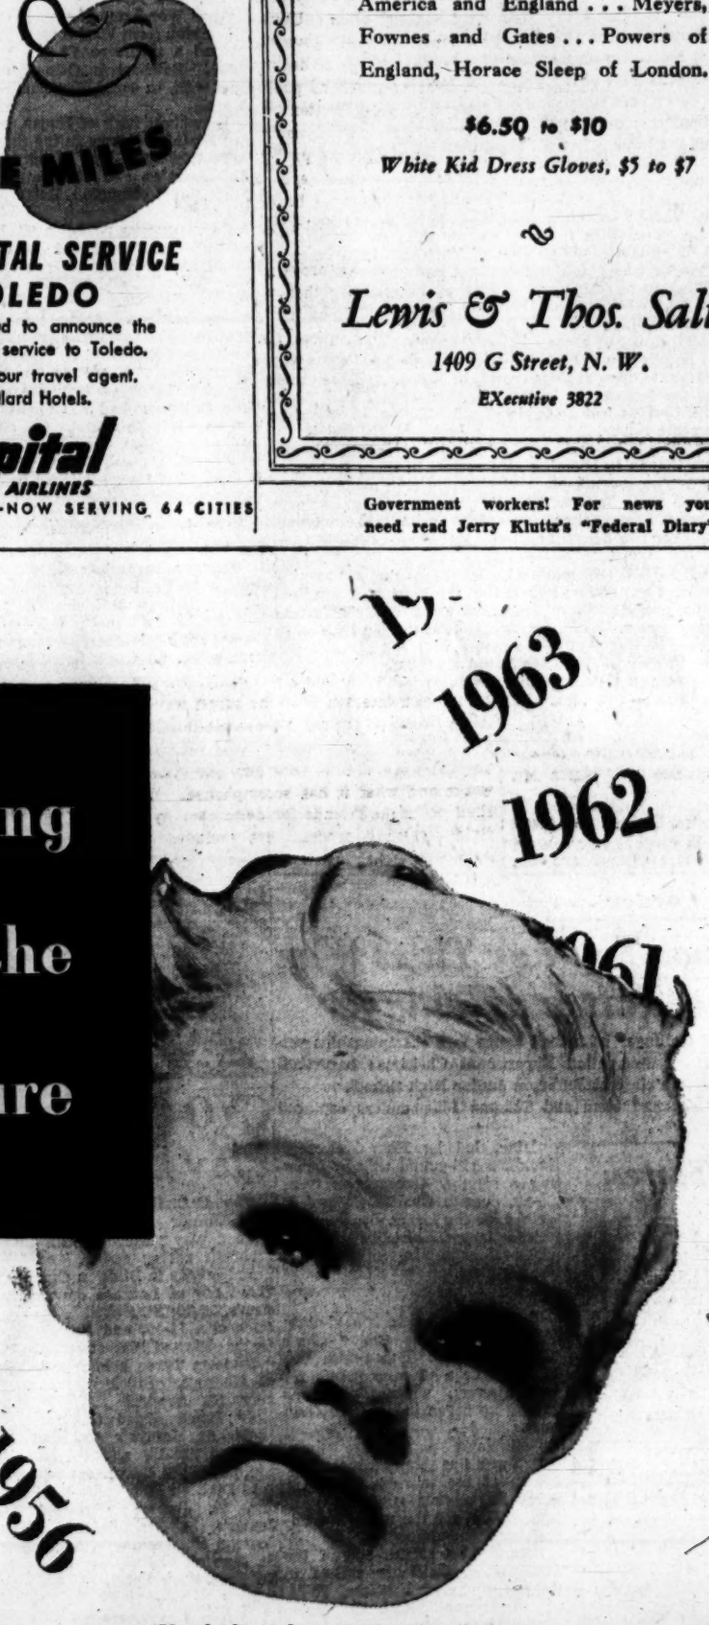
looking at the future



Yes, he has a long way to go to reach the future that his parents plan for him . . . but he'll grow up in no time and they will be glad they had a savings account.

That is why sensible men and women today are saving regularly.

They want the best opportunities for their children, and they realize that a growing savings account is the best means to this end.

Nothing affords one greater pleasure than to see his or her children succeed.

Similarly, there is nothing like the feeling of security that comes with having money in the bank.

You, too, can enjoy these happy experiences if you save a little each pay day.

In fact you will find that the things you want most in life are within your reach if you follow one simple rule:

SAVE REGULARLY . . . Save at the bank that welcomes your account.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IF BABE RUTH is reading the papers these days, it's probably with a doleful shaking of his head and low, long moan about his tough luck in being 15 years ahead of his time. This week he is reading that Joe DiMaggio, a .315 hitter last season, is unabashedly asking the New York Yankees for a $75,000 salary in 1948.

POVICH

The Babe, when he convinced the Yankees he was worth $80,000 a year back in 1930-31, was the Royal nonesuch of all baseball, the home run champion, the greatest box-office magnet in the industry and the only player who could dare ask for more than $30,000 a year. He had just whacked out 46 homers the season before and batted .345.

But DiMaggio is starting salary negotiations with the Yankees for $75,000 after a season that, for Ruth, would have represented a pitiful slump. Joe hit 20 homers, was topped by four other guys in the home run department, and has confessed that his throwing arm went bad. But these, verily, are different times, with ordinary ball players getting $12,000 a year and the club owners not even blinking at the salary rate.

OUT IN CLEVELAND the other day, Owner Bill Veeck announced that he had signed Walt Judnich, late of the Browns, for $12,000 and estimated that the club's payroll for next season would top $400,000. Both of those figures are significant of the inflated times.

Judnich was a .258 hitter last season and the year before he banged the ball to all corners of the infield to amass a mere average of .262. Yet he can claim a salary that, before the war, was reserved for the outstanding stars of the majors. With the Cleveland Club, Judnich stacks up merely as a utility player, but because this is 1948 he can sign a $12,000 contract with no trace of a blush.

And the $400,000 total of the Cleveland payroll is interesting for the fact that Veeck isn't rewarding his players for any pennant that they won. Usually it's the pennant-winning team that tops the salary list, but the Indians haven't won a flag for 27 years. But Bob Feller's $80,000 a year accounts for a huge chunk of the Cleveland payroll, of course.

THIS IS NO BLEAT by this bureau that the ballpayers are overpaid. When they deal with the club owners they are not dealing with a group of philanthropists. Most of 'em drive hard bargains and the ball player who gets a big contract must be credited with having something to offer in return. In most cases they do. The likes of Feller, Ted Williams and DiMaggio represent money in the bank to the club owners.

The Cleveland club can recoup Feller's $80,000 salary on three Sundays when he pitches in the big Municipal Stadium at Cleveland where he is certain to draw average crowds of 50,000. And the games he wins keeps the Indians up in the race, and Owner Bill Veeck honestly wishes that he had a couple of other Fellers to whom he could pay the same salary.

In two years, Veeck has paid off his original investment in the Cleveland club, thanks to booming gate recipts in these lushest of baseball's times. The seventh-place Washington club made money. So did the eighth-place Browns. Baseball is a wonderful business for the club owners, even in times when player payrolls are doubled, perhaps tripled over two decades ago.

BACK IN THE TWENTIES, many a big league regular was earning only $5000 a year. The contrast now is that the Players' Committee can insist and does on a $5000 minimum for the rawest rookie who is on a big league roster. A kid getting a shot at the big leagues in former years could be signed at $300 a month, or $1800 a season, but that's out. Now he's guaranteed five grand a season.

The Yankees' $42,000 investment in DiMaggio last year paid off handsomely. He was no Ruth, but without him the Yankees couldn't have won the pennant, drawn over two million paid customers at Yankee Stadium and more than a million on the road. Out of the World Series, the Yankees took enough cash to have enabled them to pay DiMaggio $100,000 and still show a nice profit.

So I shall not weep for the club owners, who are now saddled with big payrolls. Admission prices have risen apace. You can still see a ball game for a buck-twenty, but a Yankee Stadium box seat costs $3. The baseball people can stop worrying about the threat of inflation. It's already here, and they're doing all right.

Ben Hogan Holds Lead With 70-208

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (AP).—Ben Hogan continued his mastery of the field and the Riviera Country Club course today as he fired his third sub par round in a row to remain in the lead at the end of 54 holes of the annual $10,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

Hogan, after knocking four strokes off par on the first nine, encountered somewhat rougher going on the back nine but ended the day with a 70, and a total score of 208—three strokes in front of his nearest challengers.

Bantam Ben thus had rounds of 68, 70, 70 for the par 71 course and needs but a 72 to equal his 280, which won first money of $2000 a year ago.

Three Tied for Second

Tied just behind Hogan at 211 were Bobby Locke of South Africa, whose sparkling 68 put him back in the running; Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, who came through with a 67 and Ed Furgol of Pontiac, Mich., with 71.

Lew Worsham, National Open Champion from Washington, D. C. carded a mediocre 77 for a 22 total. Baltimore's Otto Greiner shot a 73, to equal Worsham's 22 score.

Four shots back of Hogan, seeking his third victory in the fixture were Ray and Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles and the Argentine professional champion, Roberto de Vincenzo.

Ray Mangrum posted a 66, lowest of the tournament to date. Lloyd, former National Open champion, had a 70, and De Vincenzo a 72.

Low amateurs going into the final 18 holes tomorrow are Douglas Ford of Elmsford, N. Y., with a 75 today for 219, and the last man to finish, Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, who had a 71 for 219.

Two of today's erstwhile close contenders, Stan Leonard of Vancouver, B. C., and Vic Ghezzi of Kansas City, Kans., faltered before the par cracking efforts of their fellow pros. Ghezzi had a 74 for 214 and Leonard blew himself to an 80 for 220.

Hogan, apparently a little bothered by one of the largest galleries in the 22-year-old history of the event, missed a 3-foot putt by mere inches on the eighteenth—the same fate, within a fot, that befell Locke.

Young Tokle Nosed Out In Ski Memorial

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Jan. 4 (AP).—The American ski-jumping debut of 25-year-old Arthur Tokle, brother of the famous late Torger Tokle, was spoiled today at Bear Mountain Park by another Norwegian, Odd Harsheim.

With several thousands lining the hill to witness the third annual Torger Tokle Memorial Jump, in memory of the great ski-jumper who lost his life in World War II, Arthur lost by six tenths of a point to Harsheim, who is representing the Norwegian Ski Association.

Harsheim displayed more style as he negotiated two leaps of 127 feet for 204.3 points. Young Tokle had two jumps of 132 and 129 feet but fell down on form, one of the judging points. Tokle had 203.7 points.

Kyrre Tokle, 44, elder brother of the famous ski clan, repeated in the veterans' group, beating out Ken Suhl of Greenfield, Mass., and Hans Strand, Bear Mountain's former national seniors ruler, who finished in that order. He had jumps of 112 and 119 feet for 179.3 points.

SMU Won Title With it But . . .

Matty Bell Will Ask Coaches To Abolish Try for Extra Point

Dallas, Jan. 4 (AP).—Matty Bell, a football coach whose team won the Southwest Conference championship by the margin of a point after touchdown, will renew his fight for its abolition this week when the National Football Coaches Association meets in New York.

Bell, whose Southern Methodist University eleven went through a season and a bowl game undefeated although twice tied, says doing away with the point after touchdown will bring greater thrills to the game; it will make the teams "shoot the works."

"Every year," he said, "we hear the argument that the professional teams are making their game more interesting and exciting than the college brand and that we have to do something to keep pace.

"Consequently, the trend usually is to copy after the pros, like we did in adopting their rule permitting a forward pass to be thrown from any point behind the line of scrimmage.

"A Stride Forward"

"I contend that we can take a long stride ahead of the pros in the matter of thrill production by abolishing the try for point after touchdown. It was designed, of course, to reduce the number of tie games. For years we've all agreed that too much value is placed on the ability to place or drop-kick a football over the crossbar from 10 or 12 yards out.

"But since no better means of breaking ties has been devised, the rule has been allowed to stay.

"Few coaches think it fair for a team to lose a game by a missed extra point try after it has played its opponent on even terms, or better in all-around football throughout the game. Frequently, the touchdowns are even when one team has outplayed the other badly. It can and occasionally does lose by the margin of an extra point."

More Exciting for Fans

Bell declared that even if more ties are caused by abolishing the point try, a much more exciting game for the fans will result. "Teams seldom play for ties nowadays. They want to win. Take, for example, our game with Texas this year. We won 14-13.

"I said then and I repeat now that Texas' failure to convert after its second touchdown in that game deprived the spectators of one of the wildest finishes football ever produced in the Southwest. We were prepared to shoot the works in an effort to win. Since we had the game won by a single point our principal concern was to keep them from scoring. On offensive we played conservative football."

SMU Takes Title

The victory over Texas enabled SMU to win the conference title by a half-game.

Bell said he was going to advocate that the extra point be abolished for a year at least to see what results are produced, declaring that he believes they will be favorable.

Bell is a former president of the coaches association. This body is not empowered to make rules but it can make recommendations to the National Football Rules Committee, which often is guided by its action.

Goldsmith Top Virginia Scorer

Richmond, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—Washington and Lee lost a couple of games during the past week, but that didn't keep the Big Blue's stellar freshman center, Bob Goldsmith, of Beckley, W. Va., from shooting his way into the lead in the Old Dominion's collegiate point-making parade.

Goldsmith was up there today with a total of 112 points, including 45 field baskets and 22 charity tosses. He replaced Chester Giermak, center for William and Mary's idle Indians, who slipped to third with 103 points.

Sandwiched between Goldsmith and Giermak was another Washington and Lee ace, sophomore George Pierson, a forward who had 110 points. Pierson had scored the most field goals—47.

These three players were the only ones who had broken the 100-mark in the 1948 campaign.

2000 Welcome Penn State Team

State College, Pa., Jan. 4 (AP).—Penn State's unbeaten Nittany Lions came home to a joyous welcome today as thousands turned out to pay homage to Coach Bob Higgins' Cotton Bowl football team.

A crowd estimated at 2000 by Chief of Police John Juba surrounded the bus as the East's Lambert Trophy winners came home after a 1500 mile rail journey from Dallas, Tex., where the Lions held the highly-touted Mustangs of Southern Methodist University to a 13-13 tie on New Year's Day.

Unbeaten Colonials Meet N.C. State

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Leadership in two conferences may be settled tonight as undefeated George Washington meets powerful North Carolina State at Raleigh and American University plays host to Loyola of Baltimore.

Coach Otto Zahn's Colonials have captured nine straight games including six victories over Southern Conference foes. In N. C. State, however, they are facing one of the Nation's strongest teams on that team's home court.

If G. W. can get by tonight's game, it will have conquered what Coach Zahn regards as the best team on the Colonial schedule. State, last year's Southern Conference champion, will field a veteran team, headed by high scoring Dan Dickey and minus only Pete Negley, who transferred to American this season.

Coached by Everett Case, who is regarded as one of the game's wiliest mentors, State has only recently gone in for big time basketball. But it took the step wholeheartedly, and its present team is made up almost entirely of former Indiana high school stars.

First For State

In eleven games this season, the Wolfpack has lost only to undefeated West Virginia and NCAA champion Holy Cross. The tussle with G. W. will be the first conference game for State.

George Washington also has a veteran team, with Captain Bill Cantwell, Art Cerra, Lennie Small, Phil McNiff, Dave Shapiro and Maynard Haithcock back from last year's outfit which won 20 and lost only six. Added to this seasoned talent is big Ray Adler, a 6-foot 4-inch giant who has ably filled the center berth vacated by Barry Kreisberg.

In the other crucial tilt involving a local team, American University's vastly improved Eagles face Loyola of Baltimore, one of the strongest "small" colleges in the East.

Led by Jim Lacy, its slender pointmaking star who was the nation's second highest scorer last season, Loyola grabbed the Mason-Dixon championship with little trouble.

Veterans Back

This year's team is almost a duplicate of last season's championship squad, with Tom Gisriel, Paul Feeley and at least four other talented veterans on hand.

But American U. is the most improved team in the conference. Around new squad members Reggie Crockett and Don Hillock, former W. & L. stars, and Pete Negley, from N. C. State, Coach Staff Cassell has molded a team which will give anyone trouble.

After a slow start, in which the Eagles lost to CCNY and Connecticut, they have come along rapidly, dropping only a nip-and-tuck battle to potent Muhlenberg while trimming six other opponents.

Cassell has two complete teams, which he plays alternately. One quintet uses a man-for-man defense, the other a zone and the two units are almost on a par.

Talent Aplenty

Returning veterans Bart Fugler, Fred Fling, Tex Griffin, John Wakefield, Ralph Benson, Bill Tanney and ball hawking little Jackie Neer, plus big newcomer LeRoy Ishman are other cogs in the AU wheel.

Two other major area teams play tough opponents tonight. Georgetown's Hoyas, nearing the end of an unsuccessful road trip, face Notre Dame at South Bend, and Maryland invades Duke.

After a fast start, the Hoyas have had a hard time on the road, dropping four straight after losing their last home game with Santa Clara. Notre Dame, led by its great playmaker, Kevin O'Shea, is the final Georgetown opponent before the team returns home.

A victory over the Irish would help restore some of the prestige the Hoyas lost on this trip.

Maryland's Terps also have a difficult assignment. Duke, a perennially strong Southern Conference team, should be hard to take especially on its home floor.

Lions Routed Again by New Haven

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 4.—Displaying one of their best offensive exhibitions of the season, the New Haven Ramblers overpowered the Washington Lions, 6-3, here tonight in wild, free scoring, cleanly played American Hockey League tussle before 3500 fans.

The contest was very slow getting under way with most of the action beieng confined to center ice but at 16:21 Scotty Mair finally broke the spell and put the Lions in front.

The Ramblers rapped home three in the wild second period before Frank Porteous collected the Lions' second tally. The first two New Haven scores came while Danny Porteous rested in the penalty box for tripping.

The winners came back strong in the finale and counted twice in the first minute and two seconds to make the score 5-2 practically assuring the triumph. Ott Heller netted Fisher's well-placed pass at the midmark and Scotty Mair closed out the scoring at 13:10, refling home Foley's relay from the corner.

Only two penalties were called up until with three minutes to play Rambler Defenseman Harry Bell and Johnny Carr-Harris tangled in a real battle next to the Washington net. Carr-Harris got the better of the deal in both the fight and the penalty, for Bell being the starter of the tussle received five minutes for fighting while the Lions only collected a minor penalty for roughing.

Both net minders were given a busy night. Stevenson was credited with 31 saves against Bell's 30. The latter was called on to make 13 of his stops in the final period.

McCray Seeks W. Va. Grid Job

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—R. N. (Rube) McCray, head football coach at the College of William and Mary, confirmed tonight that he had requested permission from college officials to "talk" with representatives of West Virginia University concerning the football coaching position now vacant at West Virginia.

McCray, who became head coach at William and Mary in 1944 and who was signed to a new three-year contract by W. and M. at the close of the 1946 campaign, said he would contact West Virginia authorities at the NCAA convention this week in New York if permission is granted.

He declined to say whether he has received an offer to take over as head coach at West Virginia, or whether he would seriously consider accepting such an offer were it tendered.

The West Virginia coaching post has been open since Bill Kern resigned last November.

McCray's William and Mary team won the Southern Conference championship this year and lost to Arkansas in the Dixie Bowl on New Year's Day.

Hine, led by Hoss Holcombe, took the 125-pound title by downing a scrappy Georgetown team, 25-18, despite Charlie Collins' 11 points for the losers.

The lanky Holcombe dropped eight tallies to take scoring honors for his team.

Gunners Beaten

In the unlimited restricted class, Taft defeated the Chevy Chase Gunners, 22-15. Bob Smith was high scorer with nine points for the winners, while Bob Poch racked up seven to pace the Gunners.

Gallinger's powerhouse team, which won five straight during the course of the tourney, put on a great second-half surge to whip Eig's, 52-31, for the unlimited unrestricted championship.

Behind 11-3 at the end of the first period, Gallinger rallied to tie the score at halftime, 20-20. In the second half, Gallinger, sparked by Gerald Burns and Roy McNeill, pulled away from Eig's, who were limited to only 11 points in the second half.

Ehlman Leads

Bud Ehlman, with 18 points, was outstanding for the losers, as he topped the players of both teams in scoring. Burns, a bank manager when he isn't playing basketball, got 13 points and McNeill, former GWU star, collected 11 for the winners.

Following the games, Recreation Department head Milo Christianson presented gold basketballs to the members of the championship teams.

This year's tournament saw more than 1000 boys on 116 teams meet for the five division titles. The tournament was directed by Clint Price and Joe Mitchell of the Recreation Department.

Kramer Beats Riggs Again

Detroit, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Jack Kramer, world's amateur tennis champion, beat National Professional Champion Bobby Riggs Saturday night, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3, in the fifth match of their 65-match tour for the world's professional championship.

Kramer's win left Riggs still leading in the series, however, three matches to two.

Kramer played steadily in the first set, but his net game was way off in the second. Big Jake recovered form in the third set, however, and finished out the match easily.

In a perliminary match, Australian champion Dinny Pails beat Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador, 6—2, 6—4, to take a 3-2 lead in their series.

Aussies Near Decision On Davis Cup Play

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The Australian Lawn Tennis Association will probably decide January 19 whether to compete for the Davis Cup against the United States, the Melbourne radio reported today.

Sir Norman Brookes, president of the association, gave the opinion that the government would approve the necessary financial aid to enable an Australian team to visit America. Challenges in the United States zone close January 31.

Bing Crosby Schedules Tourney This Weekend

Del Monte, Calif., Jan. 4 (AP).—Crooner Bing Crosby's personally sponsored golf tournament, one of the most unusual in the country because it is played over three different courses on succeeding days, will bring the leading amateurs and professionals together here this weekend, January 9, 10 and 11.

The $10,000 event, strictly an invitational affair, will be a 54-hole medal event with 18-hole rounds to be played over Cypress Point, Monterey Peninsula and Pebby Beach in that order.

CYO Court Play Launched

The Catholic Youth Organization Junior Basketball League opened play yesterday with three divisions seeing action.

At Nativity in Division One play, Our Lady of Lourdes downed St. Ann's, 29-20; St. Gabriel's beat St. Michael's, 19-15, and Nativity defeated Blessed Sacrament, 20-19.

Division Three held four games at Gonzaga. St. Dominic's won over St. Francis Xavier, 29-9; Holy Name edged St. Teresa's, 22-20; St. Joseph's trounced St. Aloysius, 35-19, and St. Peter's whipped Holy Comforter, 28-13.

In Division Four contests at Priory, St. Jerome's defeated St. James's, 43-27; Sacred Heart downed St. Anthony's, 39-17, and St. Martin's had an easy time with St. Francis de Sales, 44-10.

2 Yale Crewmen Hurt in Accident

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 4 (AP).—Two members of Yale University's crew returning from a regatta at West Palm Beach, Fla., were injured early today, one critically, when their automobile overturned.

City Policeman H. C. Huckman said Holland C. Clark, 20, son of a Loudonville, N. Y., bank president, suffered a brain concussion and a fractured neck vertebra. Huckman said Clark was still unconscious.

Thomas R. Vreeland, 23, listed by Huckman as the driver of the car, suffered a gash on his leg, but was not hurt seriously.

Motorcycle Mark Set in Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—Buck Briggance of Jacksonville today surpassed the recognized speed record for motorcycles on a half mile dirt track when he circled the Jacksonville Speedway in 23.6 seconds.

Four timers clocked the cyclist in his fast run and the American Motorcycle Association, which sanctioned the program, will be asked to recognize the mark as a new record. The existing record, 27.83 seconds, was set by Floyd Emde last June at Richmond, Va.

Team Wants Game

Here Is New Note, Rassle Show Books A Concert Pianist

A concert pianist, according to Publicist Dave Herman who wouldn't know Bach from Basie, will grunt with the other wrestling pachyderms Wednesday in a two-man team match at Turner's Arena.

Tony Coscenza is his mat name. Anyway he will do the treble and Ace Freeman the bass in a match with Pat Welsh and Fred Corona (no relation to the typewriter.)

In other exhibitions, less musical, Nanjo Singh will cobra-clutch it out with Don Lee and Ivan Mikeloff faces Billy Darnell.

Mikan Gets 23 Points As Minneapolis Wins

Minneapolis, Jan. 4 (AP).—Minneapolis scored its highest national professional basketball league total of the season today as it whipped the Flint Dow Chemicals, 75 to 50. The Lakers led all the way and most of the time held a 20-point advantage. Big George Mikan of Minneapolis scored 23 points to run his total to 451 for season.

4 Classes Scheduled

Caps Begin Basketball Clinic for Kids January 13

AREA YOUNGSTERS will once again have an opportunity to learn basketball from some of the top men in the game when the Washington Capitols begin basketball classes on January 13.

Under the sponsorship of The Washington Post and the District Recreation Department, such great players as Bob Feerick, Bones McKinney, Fred Scolari, Sonny Hertzberg and the other Cap stars will teach the fine points of the game to all youngsters under 18 in numerous gyms throughout the city.

All you will have to do is head for the gym nearest your home for free instruction by the Caps.

Following the opening session on Tuesday the 13th, classes will be held on the next three Tuesdays, January 20, January 27 and February 3.

Unlike last year, when the Caps held classes in the afternoon, this year's clinics will take place at 6:30 p. m.

After the Caps demonstrate various phases of the game such as dribbling, free throws, pivot play, set shooting and ball handling, the youngsters will take the floor and try their own skill under the supervision of the Caps.

All boys will fill out registration cards at the opening clinic and those who attend regularly will receive diplomas.

Classes will be held at the following schools: Wilson, MacFarland, Powell, Stuart, Jefferson, Anacostia, Banneker, Randall, Francis and Langston.

CU Preps for Tilt With Sho'men Here

Catholic Univeristy's courtmen will resume practice today pointing for next Saturday night's game with Washington College at Brookland. Coach Gene Augusterfer's squad hung up a 1-2 record in preholiday games, trouncing Gallaudet in its debut, 67 to 40, then bowing to Mason-Dixon Conference Champion Loyola, 62-46, and to Navy, 59-34.

Gene Szklarz tops the scorers with 36 points, followed by George Laubecker with 31, and Scotty Cranston with 25.

Dartmouth Hard Pressed to Beat Clarkson

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 4 (AP).—The Dartmouth Indians wound up Buffalo's intercollegiate hockey circus today with a clean slate of four victories by defeating Clarkson Tech 2-1.

Colgate won its first victory of the series by handing Williams its third defeat against no victories, 5-0.

Kansas State's 'Cinderella Kids' Top 26 Unbeaten Teams

Bill Bennings

At Gulfstream.

Dear Folks:

The Virginia Horsemen's News arrived and it has some interesting data on breeding in the Old Dominion State. Kentucky has lost a promising stallion to Virginia. Townsend B. Martin has set up breeding headquarters at the R. C. Winmill farm at Warrenton and has sent Cravat there as well as a large group of mares. Friend George C. Clark, present owner of Belmont Plantation, made famous as a thoroughbred nursery by the late E. B. McLean, purchased Blanditia, the dam of Bastinado and Tintia in Kentucky. Clark has said he will not race horses, but is interested in raising and selling them. Blanditia, by the way, is in foal to Roman. The sire Pilate, standing at the North Wales Stud, Warrenton, has had 185 sons and daughters racing and they have averaged $8944 in earnings. Dr. H. B. Langdon's Bull Moose is gaining recognition in the stud. The son of Teddy has sent 28 of his t othe races. The caliber of Bull Moose stock seems to have improved in the last couple of years. Few Virginians know trotters and pacers are bred in their State. C. T. Black of Troy, N. Y., has leased a portion of the Audley Farm near Berryville and maintains the stallion Calumet Fingal and 32 brood mares. It was Audley Farm that produced such flat stars as Princess Doreen, Gallant Knight and Ethel Gray. A. S. Hewitt has shipped the stallion Maxim from Kentucky to the Montana Hall Farm near White Post—BILL.

Longden Near 3000 Winners

ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 4 (AP).—For Champion Jockey Johnny Longden, the next 77 victories will be the hardest—certainly the most important.

Because as things stood today by unofficial tabulation, Longden was only that many wins away from becoming the first American jockey to capture 3000 races.

The little English-born, Canadian-reared rider brought his total to 2923 winners by booting in his first pair of firsts on the second day of the new year.

This was by way of keeping alive his red-hot 1947 streak which brought him 316 victories, the most scored since 1908, and not too far behind the American turf record of 388 hung up by Walter Miller in 1906.

Longden also was the first jock to top the 300-mark since Jackie Westrope booted home 301 in 1933.

Longden is far and away the American leader in total wins. He once said that he would quit when he reached the 3000 mark.

BUT NOW that he is virtually certain to reach the coveted goal this year—he has averaged about 140 winners for his 21 years in the saddle—Longden's associates aren't so sure. They thing he might be tempted to continue in pursuit of England's Gordon Richards, who at last count was up around the 3300 figure.

However, nobody would blame the 5-foot titan of the stirrups if he hung up his tack for good. He has won more than five million dollars in purses for owners, and considerably more than the customary 10 per cent is believed to have wound up in Longden's hands.

GW Game Behind With Nine in Row

By Joe Reichler

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Topping a list of 27 unbeaten teams, Kansas State's basketball team was being heralded in college circles today as the newest "Cinderella Kids" of the court game.

From a "weak sister" in the Missouri Valley Athletic Association last year, the whooping Wildcats have progressed at such a rapid rate th's season that they generally are regarded as the team to beat, not only for the Big Six title, but also for national honors.

Under Coach Jack Gardner, the undefeated K-Staters, who last year finished in a tie for last place in the Conference race with only three victories in 10 starts, have caused 10 rival fives to yell "uncle."

Staters Win Big Six Meet

Kansas State already has captured one crown, having turned back Oklahoma, current Big Six titleholder; Kansas and the mighty Oklahoma Aggies in succession to win the special prerace Big Six tournament.

In handing the Aggies a 50-43 beating, their only one in 10 games, the Wildcats became the first team to score as many as 50 points against Coach Hank Iba's team in 10 years.

The most surprising part about Kansas State's success is that with the exception of two players, Howard Shannon and Clarence Brannum, it is the same team that fared so miserably last year. Even Coach Gardner says he can't understand it.

They Beat St. Joseph

The mid-Westerners made it 10 wins in a row last night when they whipped St. Joseph 59-44, breaking out of a 30-30 deadlock in the early minutes of the second half with a 10-point spurt.

The Wildcats lead a total of 26 teams as yet unbeaten, 17 of which are of major proportions.

Of last Sunday's list of 36 undefeated teams, ten dropped by the wayside during the week.

They included Bradley, which had won 11 straight; Texas, 10 in a row; Toledo, Hamline, Western Kentucky, Alabama, Illinois, Washburn and Ball State and Colorado.

Illinois was the latest to fall out of the unbeaten class losing to Wisconsin 52-47 in an upset Saturday night.

One triumph behind Kansas State comes Louisville and George Washington with nine victories and no defeats. Louisville whipped Dayton 69-53 for its ninth win last night. New York University heads an imposing list of eight-game winners. Others include Seton Hall of New Jersey, La Salle of Philadelphia, Hofstra, Western Reserve, and Kirksville of Missouri.

Seton Hall Wins Four

Seton Hall larrupped four major opponents during the week for the best showing. They were Rutgers, Dartmouth, Toledo and Baldwin-Wallace, handing Toledo its first defeat in 10 starts, and ending B-W's seven-game winning streak. LaSalle triumphed over Southern California and Utah and NYU bested Temple and Colorado.

St. Louis, with seven straight wins, rapidly is taking place among the country's top outfits. Their 61-46 conquest of Holy Cross, last year's NCAA champions, following on the heels of a win over Georgetown, stamped them as another team to be reckoned with for national honors.

Other seven - game winners among the undefeated include Duquesne, Carbondale, Georgia and North Carolina. Duquesne nipped Yale 60-57 Saturday night and North Carolina thrashed Maryland 70-46 in a Southern Conference clash.

Iowa, which trounced Princeton 52-40 last night leads five teams with records of 6-0. The others are Columbia, Providence, Clarkson and Regis of Denver. All were idle Saturday night. West Virginia gained its fifth straight victory last night breezing past Washington and Lee 78-35.

D. C. Track Stars Shine In Meet Here

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

AMONG OTHER things, the invitational track meet in the National Guard Armory Saturday night proved that Washington's homegrown athletes could more than hold their own against the Nation's top competitors.

Heading the list of Washington performers was the 5-foot, 6-inch Billy Mathis, sprint specialist of the University of Illinois. Although the former Cardozo High of Washington lad didn't find the floor to his liking ("it doesn't have enough spring," he said before the meet), he still came home first in the 70-yard sprint and took thirds in the 80 and 100.

Most spectacular in the light of his age and experience was the performance of 18-year-old Marcellus Boston, a senior at Cardozo, and protege of Mathis.

Boston finished only a stride behind Mathis, and the Illinois flash took the 70 in 7.2 seconds. He was a stride behind Mathis again in the 80. But it was in the 100-yard dash, that Boston turned in his most amazing performance.

COMPETING against some of the Nation's top collegiate sprinters Boston took second. Only Joe Cianciabella of Manhattan, who took the sprint series point competition, led him to the wire. And Cianciabella had to cover the distance in 9.8. Boston even beat Mathis, who took third place. Fourth was Dick Houden, Wisconsin's century ace.

It was the whirlwind finish of anchor man Jimmy Zuppa that enabled Catholic University to crack the Mason-Dixon Conference one-mile relay record with a 3:43.4 performance. Zuppa, a standout at Central High in 1941, turned back the stretch bid of Johns Hopkins' Earl Glinn to gain the victory for the Cardinals.

ONE OF ZUPPA'S teammates at Central, Al Hayden, was wearing the colors of Fordham Saturday night. And as lead-off man, he helped the Rams take second place to Michigan in the One-Mile Relay Open.

Mario Salvanelli, who excelled as a shot putt and discuss tosser at Roosevelt back in 1944, showed that he could leap the hurdles with the best of them. Salvanelli, now wearing the University of Maryland spangles, took a second place in the 70-yard high hurdles first heat, losing only to Billy Mitchell of Georgetown, the eventual winner.

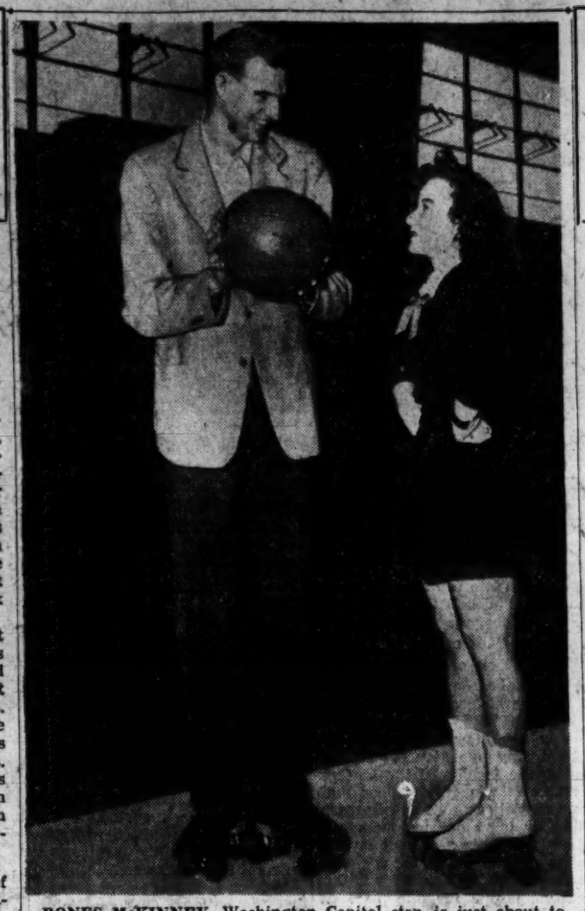
Salvanelli took third in the finals behind Mitchell and Bob Leeke of North Carolina College. Another Washington boy competing in the hurdles event was Ray Leeth of Brown University.

FORMER interhigh hurdles champion from Western, Leeth finished right behind Salvanelli in the first heat. However, in the finals, he misstepped after the first hurdle, had to take an unconventional ninth stride before the second hurdle and finished fifth, out of the money.

Three Washington boys proved promising during the early stages of the 100-yard open handicap event, in which Mathis and Boston didn't compete.

In the third heat eliminations, Ray Hill of Phelps Vocational High, given a 2-yard handicap, took second place to Charles White, North Carolina College boy, who was clocked in 9.9.

In the fourth heat, Jim Walker of Cardoo, with a 2-yard handicap, took second. Sam Wright of Phelps, with a 4-yard handicap, took second. Walker and Wright finished two-three in the semifinals, but were out of the running in the finals.



BONES McKINNEY, Washington Capitol star, is just about to try out a sport called, on the spur of the moment, bas-skate-ball. While pretty Mrs. Don Victor watches, Bones tries his footing on roller skates before dribbling in for a shot at the new National Arena basket. A second later the elongated Carolinian, from a prone position, claimed he was fouled

Tandberg Makes Debut Saturday

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Olle Tandberg, the Swedish heavyweight whose victory over Joe Baski last July 6 was a major surprise of 1947, makes his American debut Friday night against Joey Maxim of Cleveland in New York's Madison Square Garden. This 10-rounder tops the national boxing program for the week.

Ever since Tandberg upset Baski, knocking the Kulpmont, Pa., clouter out of a chance for a title bout with Joe Louis, American fans have been waiting to see the big European heavy.

Riggs vs. Kramer

Tennis Gets Needed Lift From Tour

NOT SINCE Big Bill Tilden and Bill Johnson ruled the tennis roost have fans shown the interest currently being directed toward the Bobby Riggs-Jack Kramer matches.

The series, which now stands 3-2 in favor of Riggs, will include a match in Washington on the evening of January 22 at Uline Arena.

For more than a year arguments have raged as to the respective merits of what tennis experts say are the two greatest players in the world today.

While Riggs was mopping up the professional field in 1946 and 1947, Kramer was exhibiting just as complete a mastery over the world's amateurs.

Included in the big, blonde Californian's bag were the Wimbledon, U. S. National and Davis Cup singles championships, plus a score of less notable tournaments in Europe and this country.

KRAMER plays "the big game," which consists of a tremendous service, followed by booming overhead smashes and constant rushes to the net. The purpose of Kramer's attack is to overpower his opponents.

Riggs, on the other hand, plays a diametrically opposite game. He uses brilliant control, mixed pace and the finest tactical mind in the game to master his rivals.

This contrast in styles is what makes the Kramer-Riggs series so interesting. For 14,000 people to storm Madison Square Garden while a blizzard is in progress shows the intense curiosity of the tennis fan. Their second match in Cleveland drew the largest tennis crowd ever seen in that city.

EVERYONE wants to know whether even so talented a master of control as Riggs can cope with the slashing drives and crushing overhead smashes of Kramer.

The two are still too near the start of their tour to tell who will come out on top. Riggs has more experience than Kramer. Kramer has more power and endurance than Riggs. The argument can go on and on. Who is the better man?

Washington fans will have an opportunity to judge for themselves on January 22.

ROGER WOLBARST.

Cooper Fights Fernandez Tonight at Turner's Arena

The 1948 professional boxing season opens tonight at Turner's Arena, where Jimmy Cooper, latest subject of a local buildup, takes on Orlando Fernandez of Tampa, Fla., in one of a pair of eight-rounders.

Stonewall Jackson and Charlie Bennett, two Washington lightweights, meet in the other feature attraction, with Jackson shooting for his twenty-third victory in 24 starts. His only loss was at the hands of Bennett last year.

Cooper will be seeking his seventh straight professional victory. After two spectacular bouts with Puggy King, Cooper's stock fell slightly in his last outing against Lucky Johnson.

Cooper kayoed Johnson, but the latter's performance was so questionable that the District Boxing Commission took some interest in the affair.

In Fernandez, Cooper will run into an experienced fighter who claims the Dixie bantamweight title. The Florida boxer has frequently engaged in 12-round matches, which indicates plenty of stamina. In his latest 12-round bout Fernandez won a decision over Joey Puig.

Whether Cooper is ready for such an experienced opponent remains to be seen. The local boy is said to have the fastest left hand in these parts. That he can hit hard is evidenced by his four-round knockout of the rugged King, who also proved that Cooper can stand up to plenty of hard punishment.

In preliminary bouts, Eddie Johnson will face Joe Mosely, Roscoe Mercer tangles with Lucky Stevens and Speedy Robinson takes on Kid Ferris in four-rounders. The program starts at 8:45 p. m.

Two Rockville Teams Chalk Up Victories

The Rockville men's unlimited team downed Lyles, 47-42, as Dave Carrosco led the winners with 18 points. In the preliminary contest, Rockville's girls defeated Webb Aircraft, 43-31.

Catholic U. Boxer Breaks His Hand

Catholic University's boxing team has lost Lightweight Johnny Arnold, who broke his hand in training. Arnold, beginning his second year on the team, is the youngster who came out to write a story about the boxers for The Tower, C. U. undergraduate paper, and decided he was as good as anybody his size. He went out for the team and won a regular berth. In nine matches he scored four victories.

Union's Statement In Cafeteria Strike

Bargaining Agency for GSI Employes Since 1938 Gives Reply to Gen. Grant

[The Washington Post is running the text of this statement of the union's version of the issues in the GSI strike. Saturday's issue of The Washington Post carried a statement by Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant III, detailing the issues from the point of view of the GSI management. Editor's note.]

Government Services, Inc., operating 42 Federal cafeterias, has forced a strike of its employes. This strike has one very simple cause: the corporation refuses to meet and deal with the collective bargaining agency selected by the vast majority of its employes.

In precipitating this strike GSI has duplicated in every respect the strike-breaking tactics of the most antilabor employers of this country. GSI has repeatedly ignored its collective bargaining obligation; it has shown complete bad faith in its relationship to the union; it has deceived its employes with respect to their rights under the law.

In a statement issued January 3, under the name of Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, there appears what purports to be an account of the dealings between the union and the employer, and an enumeration of the reasons which motivated this employer not to deal with the union. Before considering in detail the points made in this statement, two basic facts must be brought home to the members of the public who after all will be the final sufferers as a result of the action of this corporation:

1. The union involved, United Cafeteria Workers, CIO, has been the collective bargaining agent for these employes since 1938. It is not a union certified by the National Labor Relations Board and has never been a union certified by the NLRB. The absence of a certification is no accident. It comes as the result of the insistence of Government Services, Inc. When in 1938 the union first sought bargaining rights GSI refused to grant bargaining rights on the ground that its governmental status gave it an immunity from the Wagner Act. When the employer could no longer resist the demands of its employes for collective bargaining the employer finally consented to an informal election which was conducted by the Labor Board at the request of the Secretary of the Inferior. When the union won the election, bargaining ensued and the union has operated under collective bargaining contracts from 1938 until the end of 1947. Of course, the status of the union was no different than a great many other unions which acquire standing as a collective bargaining agency through designation by the employes but without a Labor Board certification.

2. The second point which must be borne in mind is that the obligation to bargain, as GSI surely knows, does not depend upon certification. It is the law under the Taft-Hartley Act, as it was under the Wagner Act, that the failure to obtain a certification is not a defense to a refusal to bargain and that an employer may not as a condition of bargaining with a union insist that it be certified.

GENERAL GRANT enumerates the following specific reasons for refusing to deal with the union:

(a) He states the new law is the "law of the land." There is nothing whatsoever in the Taft-Hartley law which imposes upon any union the obligation to submit to the filing requirements. On the contrary, under the new law, as under the old law, an employer is required to deal with the freely chosen bargaining agent of its employes, and he cannot refuse to deal by insisting that the union prove its majority by one means rather than another. No union is required under the law to prove its majority by resorting to the services of the Taft Hartley Act Labor Board.

(b) General Grant suggests that the situation of GSI is unusual because of its relationship to the Federal Government and that it is not free to ignore the law because of that fact. This involves a deception that the union emphatically not the case and General Grant knows that it is not the case.

(c) General Grant next argues he has a right to insist the union submit to the filing requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act because "an unqualified union cannot utilize the services of the NLRB in solving labor relations problems."

The sole purpose of the board in connection with labor relations problems is to redress unfair labor practices either by unions or by employers. A union by failing to qualify does not insulate itself from the jurisdiction of the NLRB to redress unfair labor practices. Consequently, General Grant's fear appears to be that the employer may commit unfair labor practices for which the union will have no redress. This is the first time in all my experience as a labor leader that an employer has sought to justify violating one provision of the law because in the future he may also violate other provisions of the law. This is a curious contention to come from an employer who boasts of peculiar responsibilities by virtue of contracts with the Federal Government.

(d) The next point made by General Grant is that other labor unions are interested in organizing in GSI and that it might be the victim of a jurisdictional strike. If, as General Grant contends, jurisdictional strikes are a possibility it seems strange that no rival labor organization, despite the efforts of the corporation, has petitioned the Labor Board for an election.

(e) General Grant next suggests that contract negotiations would be pointless because unless a union qualified itself under the Taft-Hartley Act "it is not legally eligible to speak for employes." This is simply not true. Literally hundreds of thousands of employes enjoy the benefits of collective bargaining agreements signed by unions which have not submitted to the requirements of the Taft-Hartley law. Contrary to the suggestion made by General Grant, the binding character of a collective bargaining contract in no sense depends upon whether or not the union which is party to such a contract has complied with the filing requirements. It is an interesting fact that the strange theories of law which have been embraced by General Grant are not shared even by other employer operators of Government cafeterias. General Grant should know that at the very time he issued his statement the National Food Corp., which operates 18 cafeterias in the Pentagon Building, signed a collective bargaining contract with the same union.

(f) General Grant next suggests that the corporation has a right to insist on the "loyalty" of the union officials because of the present emphasis being placed on loyalty of Government employes. General Grant has chosen to suppress the fact that there are thousands of employers under contract with the Federal Government whose relationship with the Government is fully as intimate as that of GSI to the Government and that none of these employers has seen fit to use its relationship to the Federal Government to evade its bargaining obligations.

THIS IS an obvious attempt to capitalize on the witch hunt hysteria which now dominates the Nation's Capital. Never before has anyone, in or out of public life, raised any question whatsoever about the loyalty of the Government cafeteria employes or their representatives. We deeply resent the slur upon our members contained in GSI's argument on this issue. It is typical of the contempt management has shown for its Negro employes for the past 27 years.

Though this is not the place, it might be interesting to examine the records of the Congressional Committee that has been investigating GSI's operations, which have already revealed GSI's "loyalty" to the Government in terms of questionable financial practices, unpaid debts to the Government, and violation of rationing regulations.

The list of reasons supplied by General Grant for refusing to deal with the union barely conceals the basic anti-unionism of this employer.

General Grant and his associates seem to be unaware that:

1. It is still a violation of the law to refuse to deal with the freely chosen bargaining agent of the employes or to impose conditions upon such an agent as a prerequisite to dealing with it.

2. It is a rejection of the collective bargaining principle to substitute for dealing with the union an attack upon its leaders and a systematic campaign to destroy the confidence of the members in its leadership.

3. It is still a violation of the law frequently condemned by the NLRB to refuse to deal with the majority representative and instead to encourage on company time and property organizing activities by a rival union.

4. It is still a violation of the law to threaten employes with discharge for engaging in a strike precipitated by the employer's unfair labor practices.

(5) It is still a violation of the law to bargain individually with employes by offering them a wage increase and by-passing their collective bargaining agent.

The fact that this sordid course of conduct was sponsored by an agency close to Government hardly justifies it. On the contrary it makes it more alarming.

Finally, it is important to note that the national CIO completely supports the position of our union in this dispute and views the conduct of GSI in precipitating the strike as "union busting," and a matter of utmost importance to its entire membership.

We believe, moreover, that fair-minded men and women in this community will share our views with respect to the conduct of this employer and fully support the strikers.

Poland Protests Alleged Insults Of U. S. Soldiers

Warsaw, Jan. 4 (AP).—Poland protested to the American Embassy here today that a Polish diplomatic courier had been threatened with a beating and subjected to jests from American soldiers at Karlsruhe, Germany.

The note said Mrs. Maria Berkowicz, the courier, was halted by the military police at Karlsruhe, December 20 en route to Warsaw from Switzerland.

She refused a demand from the MPs that she open sealed documents and was subjected to jests and threats of a beating, the note said. The note added that she was taken to a station at Stuttgart, where she shouted to several Polish army officers that she was being illegally detained. She was finally permitted to continue her journey with her documents returned, the note said.

Russians Report Record '47 Crops

London, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Moscow radio said tonight that Russian farmers produced record crops in 1947, exceeding even prewar yields. It announced prizes for outstanding producers.

Four women collective farmers were awarded the title of "Hero of Socialist Labor," for getting yields of more than 2400 pounds (40 bushels) of rye and wheat per acre on 25-acre tracts.

Fifty farmers were decorated with the Order of Lenin, 87 with the Order of the Red Banner of Labor and 139 with medals.

Earlier Radio Moscow reported that Soviet scientists have developed 20 new varieties of grain in the last year, all of which yield better than existing types.

Management at Fairlington Charges Arson in Six Fires

Two minor storage room fires were reported early yesterday at strike-bound Fairlington, Arlington County housing development.

A. C. Scheffel, Arlington fire chief, said the fires are being investigated.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Fairmac Corp., owners, charged the fires were deliberately set.

He said there have been six fires on the property since members of Building Service Employes Union, Local No. 22 (AFL), went on strike in December. There was only one fire in the previous three years, he said.

The fires, he stated, were one reason that Fairmac officials asked Arlington County for additional police protection. The board last week denied requests for additional police for the development and left the matter in the hands of Acting Police Chief Hugh Jones.

Samuel Levine, counsel for the union, replied to the charges with a statement that "no smoke screen set up by the corporation will hide its callous disregard for the health and safety of the tenants."

The management, Levine said, is responsible for what he termed a "vast accumulation" of trash and garbage in basements and hallways.

Saigon Fire Threatens 40,000 Tons of Rubber

Paris, Jan. 4 (AP).—The French News Agency said a raging dock fire in Saigon, Indochina, threatened destruction of 40,000 tons of rubber tonight and French army and navy units were aiding in fighting the blaze.

The dispatch said a column of smoke rose more than 3000 feet above the city and Saigon and its suburbs were covered by a dense pall of smoke.

Medicine Shortage Deplored by Red Doctor

Moscow, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The woman doctor in charge of the Moscow regional ambulance service complained today common and essential medicines were not to be had in Moscow pharmacies.

"The medical industry's work at present cannot satisfy either Soviet doctors or the Soviet republic," Dr. Tanya Zheldina's letter, printed in the union newspaper, Trud, said.

She listed sulfa drugs, penicillin, glucose, iodine, vaseline, strychnine, calcium chloride and pure chalk for ointment and pill bases as in short supply.

FOUR WAYS YOU CAN SAVE FUEL OIL—AND DOLLARS!

YOU MAY FIND IT surprising, but there's a greater demand for oil products in America today than ever before—even in the war years!

To meet this huge demand, the oil industry is producing more oil than ever before, is spending over 4 billion dollars to find new sources of supply, to expand refinery and distribution facilities.

Fuel oil users in many areas are already feeling the pinch. All users must conserve to make limited supplies last longer.

Here are four ways you can help. By following these rules, you'll not only conserve fuel oil. You'll also save money!

1. Keep temperature as low as possible consistent with health, 60 or below at night.
2. Keep doors and windows closed. Close off rooms not in use. Draw shades at night.
3. Seal all leaks around doors and windows to keep heat in—cold out.
4. Have your heating system checked for efficiency.

If everyone saves a little...there'll be enough for all!

AFL and CIO Gird For Election Fight

Each Says It Won

Wets, Drys Differ Over Gains in '47

By the United Press

Wet and dry forces, which fought out the legal liquor question in 769 local option elections in 21 States last year, tangled again yesterday in a battle of statistics.

Distilling industry spokesmen claimed that 1947 brought "the first wet gains since repeal."

Prohibition groups countered that the past 12 months produced new victories for their campaign to dry up the country, a community at a time.

Gain of 150,000 Wets Claimed

The Distilled Spirits Institute reported a net gain of about 150,000 persons in the "wet population"—those living in areas where the sale of hard liquor is legal.

The institute, which represents most of the Nation's big whisky-makers, said it has officially confirmed figures from State governments showing the steady dry progress of the past 14 years was halted, and even thrown into reverse, last year.

Dry successes in 1947 were reported by Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and by Research Secretary Laura Lindley of the Anti-Saloon League.

Mrs. Colvin estimated the number of legally dry areas "jumped about 500" during 1947 as a result of local option elections.

Drys Claim Big Gain

Miss Lindley said the Anti-Saloon League had not yet completed its survey of liquor election results last year, but added that a preliminary report on 15 States showed a net gain of 259 dry communities.

Neither the WCTU nor the Anti-Saloon League offered statistics on changes in the wet-dry population and the Distilled Spirits Institute had no reports available on the number of wet and dry areas.

Mrs. Colvin said the WCTU was particularly encouraged last year by indications of "an increase in the number of reformed drinkers." Public opinion polls, she said, indicated 37 out of every 100 American adults now are non-drinkers. Two years ago, only 33 out of every 100 adults listed themselves as teetotallers, she added.

She observed, however, that the relatively fewer Americans who drink seem to be consuming more liquor than ever. Indications are that the outlay for alcoholic beverages in 1947 will reach an all-time record figure somewhere above nine billion dollars.

Principal Aim Is Repeal of Taft-Hartley Act

By The Associated Press

The American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organization began mobilizing this month to carry out the most ambitious political program in United States union history, aimed at repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and defeat of office holders they blame for high prices.

The 30-man administrative committee of the AFL's newly created Labor's Education and Political League will meet here tomorrow to pick a director and an assistant director, and to decide how to finance its most extensive political drive.

In most previous elections the AFL has refused to leap in as an organization on one side or the other, but this year AFL President William Gren indicates it may even get behind a presidential candidate. What stirred the AFL up was enactment of the Taft-Hartley labor-management relations act last summer.

The AFL's league plans to spend millions in its efforts to get out the vote in the 1948 elections. Green has announced that the 7,500,000 members will be asked for at least $1 apiece to finance the drive.

The man most mentioned for the directorship of the league is former Senator James Mead (D., N. Y.). However, he may not be available as President Truman disclosed last week that Mead also is being considered for an Administration post.

While the AFL prepares to whip its political organizations into form, the CIO's counterpart—the Political Action Committee (PAC)—lashed out at members of Congress whom the PAC blames for present living costs.

The PAC, in a pamphlet, asserted that in 1946 "we saw how 200 men in Congress kicked off the lid on prices of food and clothing."

Now it's up to CIO members to "fight against Congressmen who fought against us," the CIO said.

The PAC's executive board will meet here within the next fortnight to develop its plans for 1948—including what it will do in Henry A. Wallace's third party campaign, which the PAC already has stated it opposes.

CIO to Launch Radio Quiz Show

The CIO announced yesterday that it will sponsor "Labor's first radio quiz" over the American Broadcasting Co.'s network, with $100 and $25 war bond prizes for participants.

The CIO said the weekly show, "It's in the Family," will have its premier at 10:45 p. m. tomorrow. Two CIO families will participate each week, with the quiz winner receiving the $100 bond and the runner-up the $25 bond.

The CIO said "the general theme will accent the viewpoint that the six million CIO families are important to the Nation."

School Strike To Continue

probably would be able to make up their lost classroom work.

"If the children are not returned to classes soon, it will hurt their school work very, very much," Mrs. Doyle said.

Striking Parent's View

Questioned on this point, Bishop countered with this statement, which he said was the view held by the striking parents:

"Having registered our protest, we feel that withholding our children from school is the only way of getting board recognition.

"The children may lose a half year in school, but that is not so bad as the fact that for the last 20 years the Negroes have had terrible schools. We must take the chance of the half-year loss in education. We feel that perhaps our children can make up the loss in summer school."

A stalemate apparently has been reached in the strike situation, with the parents rejecting the latest effort of school administrators to return their children to the Blow-Webb schools.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, in a holiday appeal, had pointed out that use of the two schools is simply a temporary measure to relieve overcrowding of Browne Junior High School pending completion of the Miller Junior High School.

Three Solutions

Rejecting this plea, the striking parents have indicated three solutions of the problem they will accept — transferring the Eliot Junior High School to use by Negro pupils; transferring Eastern High School to such use; or reverting to double-shifts in classes at Browne.

Bishop said yesterday the parents would hold a mass meeting Wednesday night at 8 at the Jones Memorial Methodist Church, Benning rd. and 42d st. ne., following the meeting that day of the Board of Education. He said the meeting would be simply to inform parents of board action. Asked whether a representative of the Board of Education has been requested to attend the meeting, he said "none has been invited, but all are welcome."

Bishop branded as a "deliberate lie" a charge by the Federation of Citizens Associations that the lack of school facilities here is "being used as a political football by certain persons, some of them outsiders not concerned at all with conditions here."

Bishop said that there had been no outside impetus for the strike of the parents. He said the steering committee did not believe the federation had studied the school situation, but that the committee would welcome a complete investigation by the federation or any other interested group.

children a sleigh ride yesterday but was too busy. Today, he said, his 13-year-old-son, John, suggested the ride and offered to drive the tractor.

"I told John he was too young and said I'd take them myself," Wyse said.

Dead Identified

The two survivors included Wyse's 7-year-old daughter, Janice, who was reported in serious condition in a hospital. Hospitalized with a broken leg was Shirley Grieser, 9, who lost two older and two younger sisters in the crash.

The dead were all from farm homes around Archbold. They were identified by State police as Jean Pearl Osborne, 12, and her sister, Marjorie, daughters of Lyle Osborne. Gayle and Charlotte Grieser, twin brother and sister of Shirley, both 13, and Patricia, 8, and Sharon, 6—children of Lawrence Grieser.

Four more children from another family with the same name of Grieser but not related to the others were Dawn, 13; Marlin, 11; Arlene, 10, and Janice, 4.

D. O. Sherer of Toledo, Ohio, engineer of the train, said later at Elkhart, Ind., that there wasn't a chance to bring the train to a stop.

("I saw the sleigh more than a quarter of a mile ahead of us," he said, "and I thought it would stop before that grade crossing.

("But when I saw it was not slowing down, I pulled our warning whistle and the emergency brakes, but we were going 80 miles per hour and we had no chance to come to a stop.")

(The train continued to Chicago after the accident at 2:30 p. m., arriving with the front of its locomotive carrying splinters of wood, bits of flesh, pieces of straw.

(Passengers said the train stopped within a mile and backed up to the scene.

("Bodies were lying on both sides of the right-of-way," passenger John Pirozi, 25, Brooklyn, N. Y., said. "And a girl was pinned on the front beneath the boiler."

(He said most of the victims were badly mutilated.

(A. S. Ammerman, of New Haven, Conn., said "bodies littered the side of the tracks," "on one side I counted five.")

N. Y. Commissioner To Summon Fuel Dealers in Probe

New York, Jan. 4 (AP). — City Commissioner of Investigation John M. Murtagh said tonight he had prepared 900 subpenas ordering suppliers, terminal dealers and retailers of fuel oil and kerosene in New York City to divulge sources and sales of their supplies.

Murtagh said he expected to question most dealers in the city by Tuesday night.

Divorce Ends Life With 16-Floor Plunge

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—A 32-year-old divorcee plunged 16 floors to her death today from a near North Side hotel fire escape. The woman was identified as Mrs. Olga B. Robinson, former operator of a small advertising agency in Chicago.

One on the Aisle—

Newsreels in Cinecolor

And Where Was Natalie Kalmus?

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE GRAND passions of my life, though a thoroughly disembodied one, is Natalie Kalmus.

It is, I admit, a bizarre thing I have on Mme. Kalmus. I have never seen her picture or even exchanged with her one of those transcontinental phone calls enjoyed by those who write about Hollywood from afar.

I know that she is a member of the Wianno (Mass.) Country Club. And had I been a student at the University of Zurich (Switzerland), John B. Stetson University (Florida) or Queens University (Ontario), I might have caught her eye during a lecturer's dull moment. Alas, none of those intellectual haunts lured me and Wianno is too far for a reformed caddy.

This morning finds my heart bleeding quietly for Natalie. I had always felt that when, as come it must, color arrived for the newsreels, Natalie would have had a hand in it. It was to have been a great moment for both of us. I have always expected to throb with pleasurable recognition when regular newsreels arrived with that magic credit line—"Technicolor under the supervision of Natalie Kalmus:"

For my pleasure in Natalie has come from the dogged way in which she has gotten about. This week alone, our Washington exhibits must have sent her spinning between Metro for "Good News," RKO Radio for "Tycoon," an England not controlled by J. Arthur Rank for "The Great Mr. Handel" and good old Cecil B. DeMille for "Unconquered." Newsreels would have had the girl scampering from Nome to Naples to Nippon. Mentally my bags have been packed for years waiting for Natalie's Technicolor in newsreels.

Warner-Pathe in Cinecolor

Such is not to be the case. The Brothers Warner, so far as I'm concerned, have pulled the rug from my happy dream. Their newsreels are now "marking the first practical steps toward the issuance of newsreels entirely in color," say they, and by the color the boys are talking about Cinecolor.

The first of these will probably be on the Warner screen tomorrow depicting what the Warners describe as "two major news events"—the Tournament of Roses parade and the Rose Bowl football spree at Pasadena.

It was bound to happen, this business of the Burbank Brothers jazzing up their newly acquired Pathe News. They have what they call a "speed-record processing, editing, titling and narration" plot afoot which the Warner Studio shorts department is handling. They've analyzed newsreel subjects and state that "a large majority is especially suitable for color." They plan to follow up the Rose Bowl coverage with regular clips for their newsreels.

True, Natalie's Technicolor did its job with the British royal wedding, but they then were bending over backwards to explain that that was NOT a newsreel, but a "feature." Probably Natalie's been off the deal while she was dozing.

Anyway, though I am looking forward to seeing the Rose Bowl festivites in Cinecolor, I can't help feeling I'm going to miss that Technicolor credit line. Natalie couldn't feel worse about it all than I do.

THE LITTLE'S "The Great Mr. Handel" has been doing what Little pictures seem to have a habit of doing—breaking house records. This color film (Technicolor!) about the composition of "The Messiah" seems to have caught the Christmas spirit of the film fans.

THE HISER, Bethesda, is having a special bill through tomorrow night: "The Raider," that documentary which landed on this department's "best pictures" list, and the British Royal Wedding—both, come to think of it, in Technicolor!

"GONE WITH THE WIND," is making the rounds of the K-B neighborhood houses. It plays tomorrow through Friday at the Naylor, going on the screen at 5 and 9 p. m. The Senator gets it the 11th through the 13th. Prices are "regular." Did you say something about Technicolor?

BRIEFS: The Variety Club inducts its new officers today at 12:30 in the Willard's Congressional Room . . . John Sebastian, that harmonica man who's been giving Larry Adler something to stay home and practice about, arrives at the Statler's Embassy Room tonight . . . John Ford receives the Redbook motion picture award tonight over WTOP at 10:30; it's in honor of such achievements as "They Were Expendable," "The Battle of Midway," "The Informer" and "How Green Was My Valley" . . . Alexandria's Little Theater is having tryouts tonight and tomorrow night at its Ramsey Alley workshop; Charles Vildrac's "S. S. Tenacity" is the play, Andrew Nilles the director.

TONIGHT the National begins what should be a fine three weeks with "Carousel." That bright lilting waltz starts things off in a quick succession you get three other hits: "You're a Queer One, Julie Jordan," "When I Marry Mr. Snow" and "If I Loved You." You'll miss a lot by being late.

1948 Television's Year

Television becomes a widening reality in 1948. An exciting promise is now an actual service to the American home. After twenty years of preparation, NBC Network Television is open for business.

When the Radio Corporation of America formed the National Broadcasting Company in 1926, its purpose was to broadcast better programs in the public interest—and that purpose continues to be its guiding policy.

Today, twenty-two years later, NBC has the most popular programs in radio. Outstanding in its contribution to the public welfare, the National Broadcasting Company has served the nation in war and in peace. Now, it has added a new service—Network Television—in the same spirit as that which first moved its parent company: public interest. NBC, in pioneering and developing this great new medium of information, news, entertainment, and education, is fully aware of its responsibility.

In 1948, NBC offers to the public the greatest medium of mass communication in the world—Network Television.

NBC's TELEVISION NETWORK

In the East, four stations now make up the new NBC Television Network: WNBT, New York; WNBW, Washington; WPTZ, Philadelphia; and WRGB, Schenectady. WBAL-TV, Baltimore, and WBZ-TV, Boston, will be on the air shortly as NBC's fifth and sixth television affiliates.

In the Midwest, three NBC affiliates are independently engaged in telecasting operations: KSD-TV, St. Louis; WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee; and WWJ-TV, Detroit. It is anticipated that within the year these stations will be carrying network television programs originating in Chicago, where NBC will open its station. In addition, NBC will construct a station in Cleveland.

On the West Coast an NBC station is under construction in Los Angeles. It will serve as a focal point for the establishment of a western regional network.

The plan for 1948 and 1949: To add ever-increasing numbers of affiliates to these three regional networks, culminating in a coast-to-coast television network.

TELEVISION STATIONS

Today, nineteen stations are engaged in television operations throughout the country.

In addition to the stations now telecasting, fifty-four have received licenses and sixty-four more have applications pending.

Total: 137 stations in actual television operation, being constructed, or waiting for official approval from the Federal Communications Commission.

We confidently expect that the same NBC-affiliated stations which pioneered sound broadcasting will take the lead in bringing this great new medium of sight and sound to their communities.

THE TELEVISION AUDIENCE

One year ago there were 8,000 television receiving sets in the country. Today there are 170,000. Estimate for December, 1948: 750,000 sets.

With multiple viewers per set, NBC Network Television programs will be available to an audience of millions.

TELEVISION PROGRAMMING

IN DRAMA . . .

Kraft Television Theater is the first regularly sponsored dramatic series on NBC Television.

The Theatre Guild series brings the greatest art of the New York theatre to viewers distant from Broadway.

On the American National Theatre and Academy series, comedy, drama, farce—the whole scale of the theatre—is brought to viewers as it is played.

IN SPORTS . . .

NBC Network Television has pioneered in bringing major sports events to its audience—from the exclusive broadcasts of the Joe Louis championship fights against Conn and Walcott to the World Series games of 1947. Today, one-quarter of NBC's current television schedule is devoted to sports.

IN SPECIAL EVENTS . . .

The Presidential Conventions in Philadelphia this coming summer will be comprehensively covered by mobile units of NBC's Television Network, bringing the faces and voices of political speakers into thousands of American homes. The campaigns that follow will receive equally emphatic coverage. Since the televising of President Roosevelt's speech at the World's Fair in 1939, special events television has risen from the status of a novelty to the position of a significant communications reality.

NBC's PROGRAM SCHEDULE . . .

In addition to extra hours for news and special events, a wide variety of programs can now be viewed on the new television network. Here is the current breakdown of each week's programming:

- 7 hours for women's programs
- 7 hours for sports events
- 3½ hours for variety shows
- 3 hours for dramatic presentations
- 3 hours for children's shows
- 2 hours for educational programs
- 1½ hours for quiz and round-table shows

Two months from now the number of telecast hours will jump from twenty-seven to thirty-five a week. Still more hours will be added as the number of receiving sets increases and more stations join the network.

TELEVISION AND THE AMERICAN ECONOMY

ADVERTISING

Like standard radio broadcasting, network television will depend for the expansion of its facilities and programs on advertising. As advertising has built the wide range of radio's broadcasting schedule, so it will make possible an increasing wealth of fine programs on television.

Today, 18 of the country's large advertisers are sponsoring NBC television programs—about half of them on the entire television network. Some two hundred other advertisers are currently sponsoring programs on the twenty-odd individual stations throughout the country.

ECONOMIC FORCE

It is NBC's belief that, within a few years, more than a quarter of a million people will be employed in the manufacturing and telecasting operations of the business alone. Available estimates point to television as a half-billion dollar business by the end of this year. This new industry will grow in size and service with the years.

THE FUTURE

NBC's new eastern television network is only the beginning. But it is the beginning of a working reality. 1947 marks the end of television's interim period. 1948 signifies the appearance of television as a new force in the United States. The greatest means of mass communication in the world is with us.

Loyalty Board, Clark Expected to Clarify, Augment List of Fronts

LOYALTY: Two more developments are brewing on the Federal Worker Loyalty front. They are:

1. Clarification of the Attorney General's list of "subversive" organizations by Civil Service's Loyalty Review Board, and,

2. A new list of organizations the Attorney General believes to be of doubtful loyalty—but not necessarily subversive.

The board, it was learned, has definitely decided to put its own interpretation on the list of 80-odd groups cited by the Attorney General. It will meet here on January 15 to study this problem. At that meeting it can be expected to write a memo to all agency loyalty boards on how the list should be used.

Some of the loyalty board members are reported to feel that the Attorney General should have made some distinction between the organizations on his list. One official put it this way:

"Membership in the Communist Party should have been made a prima facie case of disloyalty, but I don't consider membership in the Washington Bookshop, for example, to be in this same class. Yet, the Attorney General lists them without comment and it could be argued that he believes them to be equally subversive.

"I happen to believe that a Federal worker could have joined the Bookshop merely to buy books at a discount, but anyone who joins the Communist Party does so for an entirely different reason."

The review board, it was pointed out, will administer the work of between 150 and 200 regional and agency loyalty boards. It must supervise the work of these many groups. If it sends the Attorney General's list to them without comment and clarification, it's feared that some boards would suspend any employe who happens to be a member of any listed organization without inquiring into the circumstances.

Chairman Seth W. Richardson, review board chairman, has made it clear that his board won't be "hidebound" by any such list.

Meantime, there are indications that the Attorney General's coming new list of organizations will be presented in a different form—along the line to meet criticism of the review board.

Some organizations, it's reported, will be listed as outright subversive, while others will be placed in a doubtful or questionable class. In the latter category could be organizations and perhaps even unions, or locals of some unions, that follow the Communist Party line. The Attorney General would make it clear that he doesn't consider all members of the latter groups to be disloyal.

HOME: The National Association of Retired Civil Service employes is planning to establish a home for its members. Any retired Federal worker who is interested in the proposal and would be willing to help finance it should contact R. Depue at 1246 20th st. nw. Depue is a member of the house committee.

PERSONALS: Robert T. Boyd has been retired after 47 years of continuous service in the Census Bureau . . . Agriculture has given record-of-accomplishment awards to Eugene G. Moss for his work in tobacco research, and to Kenneth D. Swan for his photographs of national forests.

STORY: The Federal Personnel Manual carries this revealing sentence: "The death of an employe automatically ends his employment."

PAY RAISE hearings will be opened January 15 before the Senate Civil Service Committee. They will be conducted by a subcommittee to be made up of Chairman Langer and Senators Flanders (R., Vt.) and Chavez (D., N. Mex.).

Senators Langer and Chavez, with Representative Stevenson (R., Wis.), are coauthors of the bill to give each Federal worker a flat $1000 cost-of-living pay raise. And Flanders is drawing up a bill to lift the $10,000 ceiling on the salaries of Classification Act employes and to raise the salaries of Cabinet members and other officials.

RETIREMENT: The potential cost of the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson bill is being looked into by the staff of the Senate committee. Chairman Langer expects to get congressional approval of this bill within a month. However, the bill's cost is apt to provoke a Senate debate.

Meantime, the Civil Service retirement division is studying the bill's cost and its report will go to Capitol Hill this week. It's a good bet that its estimate of cost will be lower than any figure yet used.

RUMOR: There's a new report of a shake-up of the Civil Service Commission. The latest bit of gossip had Harllee Branch being transferred to the commission from the Civil Aeronautics Board. Branch says he knows nothing of any such switch and that he plans to stay with CAB for the time being.

Carver School to Open

Purcellville, Va., Jan. 4.—The new Carver school building that cost $106,000 will be open tomorrow morning for the 250 Negro children in the Purcellville area. The eight-teacher faculty is headed by Alfred Talbot, jr. The building contains eight classrooms, an auditorium and all modern equipment. The school buses will operate to and from the school.

Structural Alterations In Empire Are Denied

Building Owner, Three Firms Say No Changes Made During Renovation

The owner of the Empire Building, his designer and three firms participating in renovation of the structure denied last night that any structural changes were made in the building during that time.

The special five-man committee appointed by the District Commissioners to probe the cause of the partial col'--e of the building will resume public hearings today at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building. Twelve witnesses are scheduled to testify.

Four persons were killed and 12 injured in the disaster which occurred late December 16 in the seven-story building located at the corner of 9th and New York ave. nw.

Discloses Letter

The owner of the structure, Nick Papanicolas, reiterated last night that he had not made any structural changes in the building since he took it over in September 1945. He disclosed a letter dated September 5, 1947, from the City Finance Co. in which mention was made of alterations in the building. These were the only ones made, Papanicolas declared. The letter states:

"The owner agrees to do the following to conform with the District of Columbia Code at his expense:

"Install fireproof ceiling in basement.

"Place floor of store in proper condition for us to install asphalt tile.

"Place toilet rooms in proper condition to conform with D. C. Code.

"Remove radiator from wall to place designated by us.

"Install sufficient radiation to properly heat the premises.

"Change DC to AC current, or option of reimbursing us as tenants $108 for the conversion.

"Owner agrees to allow neon signs to be placed on the exterior and interior of the premises."

Welcomes Inquiry

Papanicolas and his brother, George, an attorney, said they welcomed the establishment of a public probe of the cause of the collapse and were preparing evidence for submission to the board.

C. H. Zeller of 7906 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, who was employed by Papanicolas to design a new front for the stores on the ground floor of the building, explained yesterday that the changes involved the placing of early stone (cast cement imitation stone blocks) 30 inches in front of the existing store front.

He said the new front was self-supporting, being placed on foundation footings. The work was done with a District permit and authorization from the Civilian Production Administration, he said. The latter granted permission on the grounds that the existing wood window frames were worn and that replacement was necessary, Zeller explained.

Inspectors Face Call

CPA inspectors who checked the alteration work will probably be summoned by the probe board for questioning, Board Chairman

Zoo Chief Reacts to Animals As Collector Does in Any Line

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

"A zoo is a museum of living things," says Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, who reacts to animals as other museum directors do to old vases or paintings.

As a "museum" director, he says he "looks on animals in different ways.

"Those that like you, you like. Those that you raise you have a definite feeling for, and as a collector you like what the other fellow hasn't got."

"But I've learned it is not safe to say, 'Only One in Captivity!'"

There is the case of the black crested mangabey, he cites.

"I went to Johnny Jones Carnival one time, and paid my dime to see the children's monkey circus—and there was one string me in the face."

As director of the Zoo, Dr. Mann presides over a museum that last June 30 numbered 3006 specimens ranging from a spider to an elephant, and not including such uncounted creatures as the black squirrels from Toronto running loose on the grounds.

The museum covers an area of 175 acres, and is ruled from an old house that was once the home of Judge Daniel Holt. Scratched on a window pane in the house, erected in 1805, is "Huzzah for Old Hickory" and other expressions of political feeling of more than a century ago.

Dr. Mann's stronghold in this once-rural mansion is a large second floor room with an overflowing desk and tables, and hundreds of books. It resembles the office of a college professor rather than of a push-button executive, the kind of a professor who lives and works with his materials.

Dr. Mann, with his shuffling gait, chain-smoking, and infectious, quick-to-grin humanness, is thoroughly and happily at home in his office and Zoo.

He has been director more than 21 years. His association with the Zoo is earlier than that, however. While attending Staunton Military Academy, from which he was graduated in 1905, he used to come up to Washington and work at the Zoo during vacations.

Most of the exhibits come from expeditions—he has been on seven, visiting Africa, Central and South America and the East Indies—trades with other zoos, gifts and purchases.

Some exhibits are pretty much standard in a zoo, such as camels, deer and elephants. Incidentally, black widow spiders are always popular exhibits, he says.

Many zoos, like other forms of museums, have certain directions in which their collections are particularly strong.

"A well balanced collection" is Mann's ideal and its realization his pride. The reptile house is the largest in the world, however, and he considers the small mammal collection very fine.

Attendance here runs about 2,750,000 persons a year, indicating the Zoo's popularity as a recreation center.

The zoo takes as much interest in its visitors as they do in it. The animals never say much about it, but the personnel know most of the regular visitors by sight and, like other mortals, are always interested in celebrities.

"Some people make a regular hobby of zoos," Mann says, "and visit them from coast to coast.

"Indians always come to the Zoo when they visit Washington, and look thoughtfully at the buffalo."

Many people are moved to write letters inquiring about the proper care of pets, or offering advice.

Like the little boy from Takoma, Wash., who recently wrote about the care of the Zoo's baby bears, and confided that "I overfed two Maltese cats myself by too rich a feed of milk, killing both of them.

"I can't think of nothing else to tell you, so I will say happy landings."

D. C. Man Charges Patrolman 'Beat Him Without Cause'

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A 25-year-old parttime tilesetter and railroad employe yesterday complained he was beaten without cause by a Washington policeman, while being arrested unjustly for disorderly conduct.

Though bleeding profusely from the nightstick blow over the eye, he said, he was "talked to" for 45 minutes at the police station house before finally being taken to the hospital for treatment.

The policeman said he struck the man when he resisted arrest.

The arrested man, Peter J. Stathis of 3228 Park pl. nw., said yesterday he would press charges of assault against Pvt. Jerome J. Jones of 321 K st. se., either before or after hearing on the disorderly conduct charge, set for 10 a. m. tomorrow at Municipal Court.

Stathis said the incident occurred shortly after 11:30 p. m., Friday, while he visited Mrs. Mae Q. Davis and her 14-year-old daughter, Diane, at their home, 650½ Newton pl. nw.

Pvt. Jones, he said, rapped lightly on the second floor apartment door and entered uninvited. The policeman told them there had been a complaint about trash that had been placed in front of the house.

Stathis said he volunteered to clean up the trash and went outside with Diane to gather it up. The policeman watched.

"Policemen don't have much to do to stand around and watch people pick up paper," Stathis said he "jokingly" told Diane in Jones' presence.

Jones, he said, told him to watch his language, at which point Stathis said he retorted:

"I guess you know you entered the house illegally."

Told he was under arrest, Stathis asked the charge, and was told he'd "learn that at the station house."

He said he agreed to go and told the policeman he would "as soon as I get my coat."

"When I started up the stairs," reported Stathis, "Jones grabbed me by the shoulder, spun me around and hit me over the eye with his billy.

"The blow dazed me. There was lots of blood. I started to run up the alley towards my home but got so weak I had to stop."

He said Jones caught up to him, jammed a gun in his back and walked him that way to Georgia ave., about one block. Then the policeman put his gun away and walked Stathis to the station house, Park rd. between Georgia and Sherman aves. nw., where he was charged with disorderly conduct. This was about 11:40 p. m.

PETER J. STATHIS
Charges Beating

PVT. JEROME J. JONES
"Had to Use My Baton"

He said he repeatedly asked the police lieutenant "and other policemen there" to take him to the hospital. They told him, he said, there was no patrol wagon.

Police Lieut. Todd O. Thoman, officer in charge of No. 10 Precinct stationhouse at the time, yesterday verified Stathis' story of his wait at the stationhouse.

"It was a question of transportation," declared Lieut. Thoman. "He had a cut over his eye, but if he'd been bad off I'd have taken him to the hospital in my own car. He insisted so much that we finally started to take him in a scout car, but the patrol wagon came back and we took him in that."

Stathis' other charges, Lieut. Thoman said, were "between him and Pvt. Jones" and would be taken care of at the hearing.

Before being taken to Garfield Hospital about 12:30 a. m., Stathis posted $5 collateral on the disorderly conduct charge. At the hospital, three stitches were required to close the cut over his left eye.

He said he returned to the stationhouse after hospital treatment to complain of the arrest and was told to "go on home before you're arrested again."

Pvt. Jones, in his signed version of the incident said he "had to use my service baton to effect and maintain my arrest" when he attempted to arrest Stathis for "disorderly conduct (indecent language)."

"Stathis fought me off when I attempted to catch hold of him," the policeman wrote in his report.

Stathis denied using "indecent language" and said Diane witnessed the arrest and would testify for him tomorrow.

Mrs. L. M. Jones of 650 Newton pl. nw., said yesterday she telephoned the trash complaint to police Friday night. She said she was no relation to the arresting officer, nor did she know his name was Jones. She did not witness the arrest, she said.

Private Jones, 28, who served in the Navy during the war, joined the police force in 1943. On December 13, he was fined $75 on a charge of having fallen asleep on his beat on November 30. He had pleaded guilty to the charge at Police Trial Board, his first and only appearance before the board.

On July 3, 1946, while off duty, Jones shot and killed a man who had pulled a knife in a fight with another. The knife-wielder, Jones told a coroner's jury, theratened him when he attempted to break up the fight. The jury found the death "justifiable homicide."

Ten Injured In Fights Go To Hospitals

A wrench, poker, hammer, and iron pipes were among weapons which sent 10 persons to hospitals for treatment following disputes yesterday and late Saturday night.

Julius G. Cox, 47, of 1317 Riggs pl. nw., was treated at Garfield Hospital for head injuries after he was struck with the wrench during an argument in the 1800 block of S st. nw.

Struck on the head with a hammer during an argument at 1638 6th st. nw. was Frank Patterson, 51, of 634 S st. nw., who was treated at Freedmen's Hospital. Police accused Eunice Simms, 35, of the 6th st. address of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Struck With Poker

Lilly Marshall of 1622 O st. nw. was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for scalp lacerations after she was struck on the head with a furnace poker.

Injured withiron pipes were Edward R. Johnson, 23, of 465 New York ave. nw., treated at Freedmen's Hospital for scalp lacerations, and Aurelia Mosby, 919½ Desmond ct. sw., treated at Providence Hospital for head injuries. Police charged Elusia M. White of 918 Desmond ct. sw. with assault with a dangerous weapon in the Mosby case.

Ice Pick Victim

Thomas B. Fitzgerald, 37, of 626 Columbia rd. nw., was stabbed in the back with an ice pick. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Mary Davis, 23, of 634 N st. nw., was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a knife wound in her right hip. Edith Mills, 27, of 3602 13th st. nw., cut on the left side of her face with a razor blade, also was treated there.

Record Fire Alarms

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 4.—An all-time record of 225 alarms were answered by the Martinsburg Fire Department last year, according to the annual report of Fire Chief Ward Davis. It tops by 22 the previous record set in 1946. Davis said the 1947 fire loss was about $38,189.81, compared with $24,787.06 in 1946.

Doctor's Bag Stolen From Parked Auto

A doctor's bag, containing instruments, medicines and drugs, valued at $400, was stolen Saturday night from a parked auto, police reported.

The owner, Dr. Sam L. Tabb of 5420 Kansas ave. nw., told police the theft occurred between 9 p. m. and 2 a. m. while his car was parked in the 900 block of 18th st. nw.

Three auto thefts were also reported to police yesterday. James J. Biebower, security officer of the Central Intelligence Agency, 2430 E st. nw., reported a station wagon stolen from in front of the agency.

Clement Freitag of 102 E. Thornapple st., Chevy Case, Md., said his car was stolen from 10th st. and Maine ave., while Nicholas J. Cangenie of 521 6th st. se., reported his car stolen from in front of his home.

Reported housebreakings included a revolver and $67 in cash stolen from the home of Lawrence Richards, 75 Rhode Island ave. nw., and $39 in cash stolen from the home of James Shirlen of 419 20th st. ne.

Charges Against Kilgore Up Today

Charges of intoxication and disorderly conduct will be tried in Huncipal Court at 10 a. m. today against Manley W. Kilgore, Government executive, who claims he was kicked by a policeman when he was arrested December 24.

The defendant, chief fiscal and budget officer at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., has alleged that he was kicked in the face by Police Pvt. George R. Douglas at the Eighth Precinct Station. Kilgore's arrest followed a traffic accident in which a taxicab struck a woman at Wisconsin ave. and Ellicott st. nw. Kilgore was a passenger in the cab.

Install 1948 Officers

Cafe Owner, Grocer, Six Others Held Up in City

No Guns Shown But Bandits Take $745, $152, $119, $6 From Victims

Eight persons were robbed here over the weekend, including a grocery store owner who lost $745 to a holdup man.

Sol Kotz, 25, owner of a grocery store at 834 3d st. sw., told police he was sitting behind his cash register about 11:30 p. m. Saturday when the bandit entered, motioned as if he had a gun and demanded the money.

Kotz said he was alone at the time although the last customer had departed only a few minutes before. He said he believed a man who earlier had pretended to use the telephone in the store was the bandit's partner and had come in to "case" the place.

Cigar Box, $152 Stolen

The $745 was the entire day's receipts. Kotz said he has been in the grocery business only about six months.

Martin Laffel, proprietor of the Ship's Cafe, 703 8th st. se., told police he was robbed of $152 about 1:40 a. m. yesterday.

Laffal said he was carrying the day's receipts in a cigar box from the restaurant to his apartment upstairs, when a man stopped him in the doorway, pressed what Laffal thought was a gun in his back and took the money.

The night clerk of the Stratford Hotel, 25 E st. nw., reported he was robbed of $119 while on duty about 4:15 a. m. yesterday. Morris Parmele of 1223 15th st. nw., the clerk, told police the bandit pretended to have a gun.

Two Held Up by Soldiers

Police last night were searching for two soldiers believed to have robbed two men within an hour in downtown Washington.

Thomas A. Russell of Winchester, Va., said the pair approached him near 14th and I sts. nw. about 12:30 a. m. yesterday, threatened him with a pocket knife and took his wrist watch, valued at $15.

An hour later, Claude Bland, 30, of 1239 10th st. nw., told police he was approached by the two soldiers at Vermont ave. and K st. nw., where they held a pocket knife against his throat while they took $6 in cash and his topcoat and sport coat from him.

3 Men Steal Billfold, $3

Patrick O. Burke, 59, of 622 23d st. nw., was robbed of his billfold, containing $3 and papers, by three men, while he was walking in front of his home Saturday night.

Police shortly after arrested William T. Steele, 20, of 608 23d st. nw., on charges of robbery and carrying a concealed weapon—a switch-blade knife. The other two men are still at large.

Lamb A. Basnight of East Lake, N. C., was beaten and robbed of $25 by four men. He was treated at Garfield Hospital for head injuries.

Police Chase Nabs 3 Boys In Stolen Car

Three Washington teen-agers in a stolen car were arrested yesterday by Montgomery County police after pursuit through Chevy Chase.

The driver was 15, and was perched on a small tin suitcase to see through the windshield. The other boys were 14 and 16.

Police said the youngsters sped through six red traffic lights and four stop signs at speeds between 80 and 90 miles an hour before they skidded to a stop after six police bullets zinged into and past the car.

Lester Jones and William W. Hitchens of the Montgomery County Bethesda substation first spotted the speeding car on MacArthur blvd.

Thence the car dashed along Massachusetts ave., Western ave. and other nearby streets. A Washington police car joined in the chase until the auto crossed the District line.

Then other Montgomery County police and a Maryland State police car joined in as the chase continued out Connecticut ave. and Kensington pkwy. to near Kensington, where Policeman Hitchens, a former Marine, began firing at the speeding vehicles.

Three bullets struck the car, one going through the rear window, striking the windshield and spattering lead and glass inside the car. Nobody was hurt.

Area News in Brief

Man Shot in Head With Rifle; 1 Held

Robert R. Countis, 28, of 1225 1st st. se., was in serious condition at Providence Hospital yesterday with a bullet wound in the back of his head.

Police said he was shot with a .22 caliber rifle during an argument in front of a service station in the unit block of M st. se., Saturday night. Police charged Thomas H. Clark, 46, of 75 M st. se., with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Also charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, following an altercation in a home in the 100 block of R st. ne., was James Gilbert, 41, of 10 Quincy pl. ne. Police said he fired one shot from a gun into the leg of a table during an argument with James T. Harding, 702 Columbia rd. nw. No one was injured, police said.

Candy Shop Robbed

Thieves who smashed the window of a candy shop at 1109 7th st. nw. before midnight Saturday took 12 boxes of candy. Broken glass ruined several other boxes, Constantine A. Roumel, 3044 Davenport st. nw., proprietor of the shop, said yesterday. Roumel made no estimate of the loss.

Ice Cream Stolen

Two teen-age boys entered a High's ice cream store at 1539 North Capitol st. Saturday night and fled with 14 packaged sandwiches, and another High's store also was robbed of $12 in cash during Saturday night, police were told yesterday.

Mattie Hooper, clerk at the North Capitol st. store, told police she was waiting on a customer when the sandwiches, valued at 15 cents each, were stolen.

Myra Moody, clerk at the High store at 2016 P st. nw., reported entry of the P st. store.

'Town Meeting' Friday

Montgomery County members of the Maryland State Legislature will participate in a "town meeting" Friday at 8:30 p. m. in Leland Junior High School, Chevy Chase. The meeting is sponsored by the Montgomery County Committee of Americans for Democratic Action and has been indorsed by the Montgomery County Civic Federation and the allied civic groups of Silver Spring.

State Senator Roy Tasco Davis and Delegates Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., DeWitt S. Hyde, Julian P. King, R. Duncan Clark, Leona M. Rush and John R. Reeves will answer questions concerning legislative plans for meeting State and county problems.

Blair Lee 3d, editor of the Maryland News, and son of E. Brooke Lee, who recently retired as county Democratic leader, will be moderator. Leon Henderson, head of the executive committee of ADA and former head of the OPA, will serve as chairman.

Winter Dance Planned

Plans for a winter dance will be made at a meeting of the Arlington County Detachment, Marine Corps League, at 8 p. m. Wednesday at 2030 16th st. nw.

G. W. McClain Nominated

George W. McClain, 5 Sedgwick lane, Luxmanor, Md., has been nominated for presidency of the Luxmanor Citizens' Association. New officers will be elected January 15 at the home of Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Crain, 6004 Roseland lane.

Other candidates are: Vice president, M. Thomas Bartram; secretary, Commander J. S. Turner; treasurer, Mrs. Lloyd Runkle; executive committee members, Mrs. Fisher McDonald and Wilmer H. Balderson.

Charles T. Johnson

Charles Thomas Johnson, 80, Germantown, Md., postmaster for the past 40 years, died yesterday at his home there after a brief illness.

A life-long resident of Montgomery County, Mr. Johnson was born in Clarksburg and was a farmer. Before he became postmaster he operated a farmers' supply and exchange business in Germantown.

His wife, the late Mrs. Jennie Watkins Johnson, died in 1943, two years after the observation of their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. Johnson was a member of the Masons and Eastern Star.

He is survived by a son, Charles G. Johnson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; a daughter, Mrs. W. P. Benson, Chevy Chase; a sister, Mrs. Vernon Mullinix, Clarksburg; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Baby Rushed to Hospital

A 3-month-old child strangling from convulsions reportedly induced by pneumonia, was taken to Sibley Hospital yesterday by police in response to an emergency call.

The child, Mosley Gaines, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Mosley Gaines of 318 New York ave. nw., was subsequently taken to Children's Hospital where he was under observation last night and his condition reported "fair."

Col. Silman to Speak

Lieut. Col. James B. Silman of the Office of the Quartermaster General will speak on the Army's "Affiliation Program" at a meeting of the George Washington Chapter, Reserve Officers Association, in Alexandria, at 8 p. m. Thursday. At the meeting, which will be held at the office of the Aircraft Components Corp., 602 Montgomery st., members will also make final plans for their National Security Week banquet which is scheduled for February 12.

Air Transport Classes

The American University will offer its second annual Air Transportation Institute in cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Air Transport Association of America January 7 through 30.

The program will follow lines of the first institute which was conducted last May. Directed by Dr. L. M. Homberger, professor of transportation, American University, the full-day curriculum is planned to give present and future junior executives an over-all view of the Nation's air transportation problems.

McAlpine Honored

William H. McAlpine, special assistant in the Office of the Chief of Engineers of the U. S. Army, has been elected to honorary membership by the American Society of Civil Engineers. Surprises Food Raiders

Frank S. Spurr, 4506 Lily Pond dr. ne., returned home about 12:15 a. m., yesterday, to surprise two men raiding his ice box, he reported to police.

The men grabbed a box of tomatoes and a half-filled bottle of wine and fled, Spurr said. He said he left the front door unlocked during his brief absence.

3 Sinks Stolen

Theft of three sinks from behind his home was reported to police yesterday by Jessie G. Blanchard of 1361 Euclid st. nw. The sinks were valued at $26, police said.

C. of C. Expansion Studied

The Bethesda Chamber of Commerce will consider establishment of a retail merchants division at a dinner at 7 o'clock tonight at the Kenwood Country Club. The group would elect its own officers, but large appropriations would require sanction of the chamber.

Reports Purse Snatched

Mrs. Nell Gallagher, 209 Mississippi ave. se., told police a young boy snatched her pocketbook while she was walking in the 100 block of Mississippi ave. se.

Couple Injured When Automobile And Truck Collide

Two persons were hospitalized with injuries received in an automobile-truck collision at 14th st. and Madison st. nw. at 4:30 p. m. yesterday.

Walter M. Blumenthal, 27, of 1241 Valley dr. se., driver of the automobile, suffered possible back injuries and lacerations, and his wife, Shirley, 21, a fractured nose and face lacerations. Both were admitted to Emergency Hospital.

Police said that Blumenthal apparently "jumped" the traffic light and his car struck a truck driven by Howard Snyder, 35, Mount Union, Pa.

$880 Million to Be Set Aside for Jewish State

New York, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The conference of the Jewish National Fund today adopted a 10-year plan for the expenditure of 880 million dollars for the purchase and reclamation of land in the future Jewish state in the Holy Land.

The plan calls for progressive purchases of land on which to settle 100,000 families. It allows an average of about 7½ acres to each family.

Empire Collapse Survivors Still Search for Apartments

The Washington Post

MUST HUNT NEW HOME—Mrs. Judith Douffas and her son, Phillip James, 2, survivors of the Empire Building crash and now residing temporarily at the New Colonial Hotel are seeking a new home, desperately needed. Mrs. Douffas had to give up a job to do her house hunting and take care of Phillip

Most survivors of the partial collapse of the Empire Building December 16 are still looking for places to live.

Practically all the furniture and personal belongings from the ill-fated apartment house at New York ave. and 9th st. nw. is in storage warehouses. A few unclaimed pieces are in custody of the Police Department.

The majority of the former tenants of the 36-unit apartment building began the New Year where they had spent Christmas—in boarding house rooms, with friends or relatives who would take them in, or in small hotels.

4 Died In Crash

Four died in the collapse of their apartments. Six are still at Emergency Hospital.

These include: Mrs. Lena Smith, 49, widow of Joseph Smith, one of the four victims of the crash. Mrs. Smith is reported as still in serious condition despite improvement. The others, whose condition is described as good, are Mrs. Ella F. Dorsey, 80, recovering from shock and bruises; Mrs. Therese Mennell, 75, who received multiple cuts and bruises; Mrs. Rowena Cremeans, 27, cuts and bruises; Dr. Hugo Lehman, 52, cuts and bruises, and James Temple, 68, back injuries and cuts.

Mrs. Judith Douffas, had to give up a job so she could look for an apartment, meanwhile taking care of her 2-year-old son, she said yesterday. She explained that her husband, ill at home before the collapse, was sent to a hospital shortly afterward, because his condition was aggrevated. He will not be able to work for at least a year, she said.

"I'm desperate to find a place to live," she declared at her room in the New Colonial Hotel where she has been staying with the baby Philip. She follows apartment advertisements daily, she said, visiting each possibilty by taxicab with the baby.

Fnds Hotel Life Costly

Mrs. Douffas said she and the baby would be "on the street soon" if she didn't find a home, because of the $21 a week hotel bill, the extra cost of eating meals out and taxi expenses added to her husband's hospital bills. At the Empire Building, where they lived for two years, their rent was $42.50 a month.

"I can't go back to work until I can find a home where my husband can live and take care of the baby," she said. Her former job was at Woodward & Lothrop's department store, while Douffas formerly operated a restaurant.

Otha R. Sullivan, 22, whose wife, Mrs. Frances Sullivan, also 22, and 3-year-old boy, Rodney Lee, were taken down a fire department ladder on the night of the collapse, said yesterday the best he had been able to find was a basement room.

"It's pretty tough to run around with a baby, looking for a place to live, while my husband works," said Mrs. Sullivan. Their room is at 1344 Rhode Island ave. nw. A veteran with three years in the Army, Sullivan said the baby is subject to asthma and he is afraid of a set-back in their present quarters.

Furniture In Storage

Sullivan is a storage worker and has stored the family belongings at the warehouse where he works, while his wife searches for a small unfurnished apartment. The Red Cross and the District Housing Center have been unable to find such a place for them, she said.

The Red Cross has aided five families with shelter or food on a temporary basis. Manager Nat C. Wilson of the District chapter reported. The agency is also providing medical care and nursing for one hospitalized victim.

Wilson explained that the Red Cross will assist any family in need of household equipment, medical treatment, clothing and shelter resulting from such a disaster, if the family has insufficient resources.

Living With Sister

Mrs. Maude Smith, another Empire resident, who has had treatment for shock since the building collapse, and her husband, George Smith, are staying with Mrs. Smith's sister at 3139 N. st. nw., and storing their furniture while they look for housing.

Mrs. Smith, whose husband is a messenger for the British Embassy, said "practicaly everyone who lived at the Empire apartments will have a hard time."

"They were all poor people like ourselves, or they wouldn't have lived there," she declared.

W. R. Marshall, rental agent for the evacuated apartment house, said he believed he had found apartments for one or two of the former tenants. The range of rents in the building was from $32.50 for two rooms and bath to $55 for some with four rooms and bath, he said, agreeing it was difficult to find apartments at similar rents.

Will Accept Anything

"Almost anything will do," said Mrs. Mildred Galliher, who is in her 60s. With Mrs. Alice Haywood, 80, she has been staying at the Central Hotel, across the street from the wrecked apartment house where they lived. While Mrs. Haywood has relatives in Baltimore who visit her, Mrs. Galliher must fend for herself. In poor health, she is unable to spend more than part of the day looking for a new place to live.

Five younger people evicted by the crash who stayed at the Central Hoteel have found temporary homes, a hotel clerk said yesterday.

One couple, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Bergland, found a room with an aunt at 529 9th st. se., while looking for permanent quarters. With them is a cousin, Miss Estelle Morris, also a former Empire tenant.

Like most of their fellow tenants, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron P. James are living in a room and storing their furniture, but instead of keeping theirs in a warehouse, they have it in a garage, displacing their car. Their address is 939 H st. nw.

"Who is going to pay for storing our furniture?" several of the displaced persons asked yesterday. Nick Papanicolas, owner of the Empire Building, said he did not know the answer.

INSPECT—From P. B-1

Alterations Are Denied

Stewart Beall said when informed of the CPA participation.

The Silverberg Electric Co. of 627 I st. nw. was employed to make electrical changes required in the alteration of the corner location from a restaurant to a loan office. Myron Silverberg, member of the firm, said the company had changed the current from DC to AC and hooked up ceiling fixtures, but had not recessed any wires or made any structural changes.

Gus Rubino of 1412 Madison st. nw. did the plastering work on the alterations. He said he had not made any changes nor had he noticed any under way when he worked on the premises.

Morris Cladny, head of the M. Cladny Construction Co., which did most of the work on the alterations, declared that no structural changes were made nor did he have knowledge of any.

Tenants to Meet On Lease Fight At Fairlington

Members of Fairlington Association, composed of tenants of the huge Virginia apartment development, will meet at 8 tonight to discuss their fight against "rent stabilization" leases offered by the development owners.

The association's rent committee is slated to report out recommendations on safeguarding rights of new tenants, retention of legal counsel and representations to Congress on rent control.

At a previous meeting, association members voted to resist leases offered by Fairmac Corp., new owners of the 3439-unit, Government-built apartment development. The leases offered guaranteed rent levels averaging more than 10 per cent higher than present rates, on one to two-year contracts. More than 2200 residents have pledged to refuse to sing the leases, the association said.

P-TA to Meet Today

Ruling Due On Scope of Murphy Trial

A ruling is expected today on one of the most disputed aspects of the trial of Fire Chief Clement Murphy on unfitness charges—whether the trial will be limited to his tenure as chief.

Four of the 13 counts in the charges concern alleged incidents of inefficiency and unfitness which occurred before Murphy took office as chief engineer, on March 1, 1946.

At the first session of the trial board last week, Defense Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue moved to strike them out. The three-man civilian trial board appointed by the District Commissioners and headed by Austin Canfield, former president of the District Bar Association, took the motion under advisement.

Two of the four counts allege that Chief Murphy ordered subordinates to redecorate his house, and caused their names to be entered in records as performing official duties.

The general charge in the specifications, drawn up by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, who is the prosecuting attorney, refer to inefficiency, unfitness and loss of morale under Murphy "in his capacity as Chief Engineer."

The District Commissioners have declared that if the charges against Murphy are not sustained, Fire Capt. Joseph W. Conroy, who touched them off, himself will face charges. Conroy's attorney, William J. Rowan, unsuccessfully attempted to enter the case to seek examination of additional information in the case, which he said is not listed in the charges.

GI Night Students May Continue At Columbia Tech

GI students attending night classes at Columbia Technical Institute were assured last night that they may continue their studies at least as long as negotiations in their behalf continue with the Veterans Administration.

Night students were left without VA backing last Friday when a contract compromise was worked out whereby VA said it would continue to finance studies of GI day students only. VA stated then that most of the night students are attending parttime and receive but little assistance anyway.

Of the 800 students attending the school under VA supervision, some 350 are in night classes. Classes resume today after a holiday recess.

H. Gordon Malcolm, school director, said last night that the school will not put out any GI student as long as there is some hope of agreement with VA.

'Carver Day' Rites Today to Begin Month of Honors

By The Associated Press

The George Washington Carver Memorial Institute yesterday signaled the start of a month-long series of activities honoring the memory of the famous Negro scientist.

It said that today, January 5, would be observed as "Carver Day" and that memorial celebrations would continue at various points across the country throughout January.

The celebrations will include public meetings, radio programs, etc., it said.

Woman Who Died In Cafeteria Here Identified

The body of a woman who died Saturday while sitting at a table in the S&W Cafeteria, New York ave. and 15th st. nw., has been identified as that of Mrs. Alice Maude Trewhella, 69, of 1432 Taylor st. nw.

Mrs. Trewhella, a widow, was identified by her daughter, Mrs. Beryl M. Brown and Donald L. Manchester, a sonby a previous marriage, police said.

Mrs. Brown said her mother customarily went to the S&W for dinner on Saturdays, and when she failed to return the daughter called police Saturday night.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said Mrs. Trewhella's death was due to a heart condition.

Mrs. Trewhella, a native of Providence, R. I., had lived here since 1917. She was the widow of Walter W. Trewhella, Washington manager for Armour & Co. prior to his death about 20 years ago.

Besides her son and daughter, Mrs. Trewhella is survived by a granddaughter, Beverly Brown.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines chapel, 2901 14th st. nw., with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Miss Addison Dies; Worked In Government

Miss Jean F. Addison, 24, former Budget Bureau secretary, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital of complications arising from undulant fever.

A native of Lebanon, Va., she came to the District in 1928. At the time of her death she lived at 6305 9th st. nw. Miss Addison attended Macfarland and Paul Junior High Schools and was graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1942.

Immediately after her graduation she became a secretary with the War Manpower Commission and remained there for three years. Following that she became a secretary with the Bureau of the Budget, where she was employed until she entered the hospital in December.

She had been suffering from undulant fever for the past six months. Dr. Depue H. Duffey, who was handling the case, said he had been unable to discover how Miss Addison contracted the disease.

She is survived by her parents, Linkous and Sallie Addison, and her grandmother, Mrs. William Finney of Lebanon, Va.

The body will rest at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., until 9 o'clock tonight. Funeral services and burial will be in Lebanon tomorrow afternoon.

Jane Culbertson Plans Wedding for January 16

By Marie McNair

ONE of the most youthful bridal parties of the season will be Jane Culbertson's when she marries Kenneth Alfred Lee Foster on Friday the 16th.

As both her sisters—Mrs. Thomas D. Luckenbill and Mrs. Edmund R. Pendleton, jr., will be unable to take part, the daughter of former Ambassador and Mrs. William S. Culbertson has decided to have only her small nephew and niece as her attendants. They're Mary Louise Luckenbill, who is 6, and 4-year-old brother, David. Their father will be Mr. Foster's best man.

The ceremony, which will be witnessed by a small company will be held in the Cumbertson's pleasant apartment at 2101 Connecticut ave., at 4 p. m. and a large reception at the Mayflower Hotel will follow at 5. Already on the pretty bride-elect's calendar is a cocktail party January 10 to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Snodgrass and another on the 14th at which Mrs. Robert Woodward will be hostess. Saturday night the engaged pair were guests of honor at a small dinner given by Miss Evelyn Walker at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mr. Foster has an apartment in New York just waiting for his bride. It's at 14 Sutton Place, South.

YESTERDAY was Christmas for the White Russian colony in Washington and there was a special celebration at the Manor on 16th st.

Starting at 7 o'clock Gregory Theov was host and master of ceremonies of a program which included Cossack dagger dancing, and gypsy singing by Michele Mishon. Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard—Zoya to her friends—also sang some of the beautiful old cathedral hymns.

Before that party got under way Mrs. John Shields, who's Russian by birth, gave a cocktail party at her home on Woodland dr., and as the evening wore on at the Manor Club, there was dancing by everybody. Some of the Stoddards' guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Mrs. John Paterson, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Massey, Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Ross and Mrs. Blake Clark.

TOWN TOPICS:

The Women's Committee of the National Symphony Orchestra will combine with Col. and Mrs. Curt Schiffeler for a gala evening on January 14 to honor Ezio Pinza, Metropolitan Opera star, following his appearance with the National Symphony that evening. The party will be held in the Queen Elizabeth room at the Raleigh and as space is limited the guest list will necessarily have to be curtailed.

Gen. Ike Eisenhower will be elected President next November, says Myra Kingsley, noted seeress, as she looks into her crystal ball.

And among other predictions for the year 1948 the prophetess sees fantastically successful years ahead for Gen. James Doolittle, now vice president of Shell Oil. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will continue to lead their lives with no spectacular changes but the Duchess' chart indicates she will do more traveling in the coming year. Big changes are in store for the Duke in 1949.

Mrs. Albert J. Bowley's cocktail party at her home on McGill Terrace tomorrow will be for her two sisters, Mrs. Addison Baker of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Alfred I. duPont of Nemours, Wilmington, Del. The following day the trio will be entertained at a luncheon by Mrs. John N. Greely and that afternoon Mrs. Albert Cox, wife of the General, will have them for tea. Mrs. duPont is on her way to Florida to open Epping Forest, her Florida estate for the remainder of the season.

To introduce them to some of their Georgetown neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Witt entertained at dinner last evening for Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams, who've just taken possession of Durham Rogers' former home at 1667 Thirty Second st.

Miss Margaret Reed Is Given Shower

Mrs. Dorothy Margaret Cersley entertained at a miscellaneous shower Saturday evening at her home honoring Miss Margaret Elaine Reed whose marriage to Charles Hughes Caudle will take place January 17 in the Shrine of Blessed Sacrament. The house was gayly decorated with white chrysanthemums, asters and daisies.

Among the guests were Mrs. James D. Reed, Mrs. Alice Rodier, Mrs. James C. Boyle, Mrs. J. Luskey, Mrs. Clinton Crouch, Mrs. Millard V. Crouch, Mrs. Edward Reed, Mrs. John Stadler, Mrs. Charles Alvord, jr., Mrs. Lloyd Hunnicutt, Mrs. John Lawless, Mrs. Richard Bowers, Mrs. Ray Messick, Mrs. Z. Dapolita, Mrs. Isabel Bray and Misses Rosmary Reed, Mary F. Davis, Mary Catherine Crouch, Mary Ann Moses, Pat Hilldrup and Patricia Ann Crouch.

Irene Ansell Becomes Bride

Miss Irene Vivian Ansell was married at 3:30 p. m. yesterday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Joseph P. A. Ansell, this city, to Bernard Woronoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Woronoff, also of Washington. Rabbi Solomon Metz officiated and a reception followed.

Given in marriage by her brother, Norman Ansell of Baltimore, Md., the bride wore candlelight satin, the off-the-shoulder neckline trimmed with a lace bertha. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a headpiece of net and satin and she carried white orchids with her family Bible.

Miss Rita Hantman, in pink net and satin with a headpiece of pink feathers, acted as maid of honor. She carried a nosegay of pink and blue carnations. Miss Miriam Fine, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid, wearing blue taffeta trimmed in pink and carrying a nosegay of sweetheart roses matching her headpiece. Leonard Woronoff was best man for his brother.

Colonel and Mrs. Hill Give Buffet Supper

Col. and Mrs. Howard G. Hill entertained at their home in Chevy Chase, Md., Saturday evening with a buffet supper and musical program for a group of railway officials and their wives. Colonel Hill, a railway consulting engineer, is now on duty in the office of the Army Chief of Engineers.

Among the guests were: P. C. Lee, Shanghai, China; R. M. Campos, Mexico City; Prof. and Mrs. L. M. Homberger of Washington, formerly of Berlin, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McCarty, Col. and Mrs. Eugene M. Caffey, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Hugh Everett, jr., Capt. and Mrs. Lloyd Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Mendez, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Norman and Mrs. Emma Gilbert all of Washington.

Stopping at Willard

Among the guests staying for a few days at the Willard are Mrs. A. Wiltshire of Buenos Aires, Dr. Charles W. Miller of Balboa, Canal Zone; Mrs. W. B. Foster of Cristobal, Canal Zone; Maj. W. B. Morrow of Paris, Louis Pineda and daughters, from Maracaibo, Venezuela, and Lieut. and Mrs. Irving White of Ewa Oaho, T. H.

Miss Wiman, Mr. Hewitt Are Married

Miss Patricia Wiman and William Alexander Hewitt were married at 5 in the afternoon on January 3 at Trinity Episcopal Church in Santa Barbara, Calif. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiman of Moline, Ill., and Santa Barbara, and her husband is the son of Mrs. Edward T. Hewitt of San Francisco and the late Mr. Hewitt. The Rev. Richard Flagg Ayres officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore ivory satin fashioned with a fitted bodice, off-the-shoulder neckline embroidered in seed pearls and the long skirt extending in a train. She wore a veil of old rosepoint lace which belonged to her great aunt, Mrs. Butterworth, and she carried a fan of white orchids, violets and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William Brinton of Charlottesville, Va., attended her sister as matron of honor and Miss Ann Heard of Washington was maid of honor for her cousin. They were gowned alike in pale blue off-the-shoulder dresses and feather hats. The bridesmaids, who were gowned in heliotrope blue dresses, were Mrs. Peter Bennett of Morro Bay, Calif.; Mrs. William Hanssen of Goleta, Calif.; Mrs. Tyson Dines of Denver, Colo.; Miss Nancy Bickelhaupt of Washington, Miss Elizabeth Sheldon of Waterbury, Conn., and Miss Elizabeth Crawford of Santa Barbara.

Edward T. Hewitt, jr., of San Francisco was best man for his brother, and ushers were Dr. Henry Thelan of Vacaville, Calif., and Walter Haas, Hiram Johnson, Edgar Osgood, Stanley Johnson, Dobson Kilduff and William Bancroft, all of San Francisco.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Feels Liked and Needed by Stepsons, But the Elder, 15, Presents Nerve Wracking Problem With Endless Demand for New Clothes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After 13 years' marriage my husband left me for a new love. We were divorced three years ago and I thought life was over for me. I found no consolation with other men, felt afraid to marry again and devoted myself to my little girl.

Finally my health broke. I had to give up my job and go away for a rest. Then my brother and his wife dragooned me into meeting Dave, an old friend of theirs, a widower with two sons.

We were very congenial, he is wonderful to my daughter and me, and when he proposed marriage, I accepted. He is 43 and I am 35; and his sons are 13 and 15, respectively. They are fine boys, grand to me and I love them as if they were my own.

The boys come to me first about everything, asking me to intercede with their dad. I know I'm liked and wanted and I don't want their feeling for me ever to change; but at times I'm uncertain how to cope. Usually I refer them to their dad; and in the end they get what they want, as he gives in to stop the clamor.

Father Demurs, Then Gives In

HOWEVER, the problem is really the older boy. The younger doesn't ask much and in fact gets practically nothing as compared to the other, who is always asking. He is clothes conscious and talks "clothes, clothes, clothes" morning and night.

I want him to look well for school and parties and he has quite nice things now; but still he isn't satisfied. He has new shoes, new suit and shirt, and now he says he needs a new topcoat and hat and a pair of dress shoes.

I've spoken to his dad about his constant nagging for more clothes, and Dave says he has enough clothes. But in the end the boy will win—he always does—unless I can handle the problem. He gets an allowance of $3 a week and by Tuesday or Wednesday is always back for more, whereas the younger boy saves regularly on his $2 a week.

I do hope you can help me. I have a wonderful husband and family except for this one problem; and believe me, it is very nerve racking. If you've ever had a youngster after you to ask dad for things he can't afford, you'll know the fix I'm in. G. S.

Boy Reflects Group Mores

DEAR G. S.: In your long letter, here condensed, you mention that the boys' mother was always pressing for, and usually getting, new things too—according to her sister's report to you.

Perhaps the older boy, whose memory is longer than his brother's, is unconsciously acting on her example today. Possibly also she favored him more than his brother, in the tradition of a mother's proverbial indulgent bias for her first-born son.

Maybe she indefatigably plied his father for all he wanted, thus (1) making him boldly selfish, while (2) conditioning his brother to heedless neglect, which caused the latter to ask or expect little.

However, it's equally probable that the difference in ages has a vital bearing on their different behavior at present. Also, that your unfamiliarity with adolescent personality prompts you to see the elder boy as a baffling problem, whereas his father rightly views him as a trial to be endured—as he passes through a phase of acute self-conscious striving to impress associates.

Phase of Growth That Will Pass

IT MAY be unfortunate, but it's nonetheless true, that material "front" becomes excruciatingly important to most American adolescents of the middle class, in their high school years. So much so, indeed, that in times past, parents who could do so were wont to pack their young off to European schools, where the accent was on frugality, manners and relentless study.

For advice: Continue to refer the boys to their father and let him fix the limit on spending, if any is set. For the rest, rock along as he is doing, bearing in mind that "This, too, will pass,"—and that goodhearted parents are endless givers from start to finish of the child-rearing process.

Know also that children in general are aggressive, persistent, seemingly insatiable in their demands for parental largesse from the time of birth until they are "on their own,"—but especially in the adolescent phase—unless their instinctive faith in the Scriptural injunction to "Ask and ye shall receive" is blighted in the bud, in baby years, by rigorous thwarting. Barnard Dean Urges Training In Budgeting

Girls should not only receive academic training in college but should also learn something about the mechanics of running a home, believes Dean Millicent C. McIntosh, newly installed head of Barnard College in New York City. And this includes, Mrs. McIntosh thinks, learning how to manage the family money, do the family shopping and make the budget come out even at the end of the month.

In a plea that women's colleges recognize that a large majority of women look forward to marriage and a family, Mrs. McIntosh declares that she thinks no one has really answered the all-important question of how a woman can best be prepared for marriage and parenthood. In a statement issued through the women's division of the Institute of Life Insurance, however, she calls for specific instruction in the handling of money.

"Women are responsible in large part for the financial administration of their households," Mrs. McIntosh declares, "and many a marriage has been wrecked by the fact that the mother of the family did not properly understand the principles of budgeting and economy. Moreover, many women have money of their own, which it is necessary for them to handle properly.

"It seems to me reasonable to expect some required course for college women in which this training is combined with some fundamental training peculiarly needed by women. The establishment of this special training should be supplemented by the development of the college advisory system to include opportunities for personal counsel and for group discussion."

Mrs. McIntosh, herself the mother of five children, can point out that her advice about preparation for marriage can apply particularly to Barnard College. Of the more than 5400 Barnard girls who graduated between 1935 and 1946, 2600 have married; since the college was founded, the percentage is nearly 7 graduates out of 10.

Edw. Mangum Will Speak At Chevy Chase

Ask Anne

Your Questions on Homemaking

My husband has made a trestle table and benches of white pine after some designs we made from the early American furniture in the Metropolitan Museum in New York. We noticed that the unpainted furniture had a very attractive oil finish. We are not very keen on a varnished look and are wondering if you would be kind enough to tell us how to treat the wood to get the soft, oil-finish effect. We will have to use the table both for a studio work table and a dining table, which means that it needs to be resistant to paint (tempra or water), plain water and heat from dishes. If I remember correctly, some months ago you gave instructions for this oiling process. If the final result is serviceable and if you will describe it for us, we will be very grateful. B. H.

Oil gives a lovely finish on woods with natural beauty of grain and color but, in view of the use to which you plan to put this table, it seems to me some other type of finish would be better in this case. Spilled paint is very likely to soak into oil-finished wood and stain it. A coating of wax over the oil finish would help some. However, I believe you would find synthetic resin varnish about the most satisfactory finish for this furniture. It can be sanded and rubbed down with pumice to give a beautiful soft effect. It is resistant to heat, water, and alcohol, almost scratch proof, and paint won't sink through it into the wood. The method of application is as follows:

After brushing on a thin coat of the varnish (thin with turpentine if necessary), let it dry thoroughly. Then sand lightly with the grain, using No. 4/0 or No. 6/0 sandpaper wrapped around a wood block. Wipe clean with a dry lintless rag. Repeat, applying 2 or 3 coats of varnish, drying thoroughly and sanding after each application. Finish by rubbing with rottenstone or powdered pumice and raw linseed oil. The harder and longer you rub, the lovelier the finish will be.

If you definitely want to try an oil finish, here is a method for that: Prepare an oil mixture of two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine. Heat in double boiler and keep hot while working. (Use cold only on carved or grooved surfaces.) Apply with soft, lintless cloth, rubbing into wood all it can absorb. This may take 5 to 20 minutes. Wipe off all excess oil with fresh cloth (heavy coarse linen or woolen). Or, for a finer finish, rub the same length of time with a fine grade of powdered pumice and felt or soft cloth. Then wipe surface very clean with cloth. Let stand two days at least, then repeat oiling and polishing. Let stand at least a week and repeat again. Five to 12 coats of oil will be needed to bring out a fine luster. At least a week should elapse between all coats but the first and second, for each coat must be thoroughly soaked in before another is applied.

If you wish to top off the oil finish with wax, make three or four applications of the oil as described above. Then dust thoroughly and wax with furniture wax (not polish) of the same color as the wood. Polish with cloth until high luster is obtained.

LATEST in electric ranges is this bantam model which requires no special wiring since it can be plugged into the ordinary wall outlet. Measuring only about 2 feet in height, it can be set on top of a small cabinet or table, but it's still big enough for roasting the family turkey! Oven, broiler, and surface cooking units are all combined, so only one of these operations can be carried on at a time

What do you recommend for cleaning a cloth-covered parchment lampshade that will not get clean with dry dusting? P. D. W.

It is hard to do a really satisfactory cleaning job on this type of shade. Going over it with a cloth dipped in dry-cleaning fluid might be successful, but try it out on an inconspicuous part of the shade first to see what effect the fluid has on the paste used. Rubbing the shade with art gum eraser is another way you might clean it. Be sure to hold a thick pad inside the shade while you're rubbing to guard against breaking or bending the shade.

What is the best way to repair a tear in the artificial leather top of a baby carriage? Can it be done at home? V. G.

Repair the leather on the reverse side with a patch of strong cotton material, in a matching color. Cut the patch of ample size and stick it to the fabric with household cement or flexible glue. The raveled ends of the tear should be worked underneath, so that they can be secured by the patch.

PETUNIA!

If You're Going South—

THE full skirt and small waistline feature promises to play a prominent role in next year's styles.

Proof of this may be found in the resort collections which designers have prepared for that fortunate portion of the population which winters in the South. The appealing full-skirt silhouette is much in evidence in spectator dresses, beach and playclothes, bathing suits and dance dresses. It lends itself especially well to such typically resort and summer fabrics as linens, silk shantung, prints and cottons.

OTHER new features of the resort collections:

Designers have found more ways to cover up than to bare. More bathing suits have skirts and matching cardigans and short capes. Sundresses have shawls and jackets. New tennis dresses fall to new knee-length or just above. Sleeveless dresses are armholed to cover the top of the shoulders.

More and more colors are being used, especially citrus tones, bright greens, lavenders and blues. There is also lots of white, particularly in coats of all lengths. The white blouse is starred for sports, afternoon and patio.

Finally, the emphasis in resort fashions is more on the feminine than the out-of-the-ordinary. Petticoats abound, and such petticoat-like skirts as the flounced and ruffles. Gathers, unpressed pleats, dainty embroiders and even lace give a sweet and pretty look to many bathing suits. Even the two-piece wool knit suit is shown with a colorful printed scarf drawn through the waistband loops of the pants.

On the Club Front

Association of Women Broadcasters, National Association of Broadcasters will hold its fifth annual convention here, January 28-February 1 at the Mayflower Hotel, according to announcement by Ruth Crane of WMAL, acting president.

The Washington planning and program committee consists of: Elinor Lee, WTOP; Nancy Osgood, WRC; Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, WWDC; Meredith Young, WOL; Jessie Stearns, WEAM; Ruth Crane, WMAL, and Hazel Markel, WTOP.

Committee chairmen are: Jessie Stearns, WEAM, and Meredith Young, WOL, publicity; Helendeen Dodderidge, Department of Agriculture, hotel arrangements; Alice Lane, WWDC, hospitality; Mary Burnham, WTOP, sightseeing; Mrs. Robert J. Coar, Capitol Radio Room, transcriptions at the Capitol; Pat Griffith, radio and newspaper woman, and Hazel Markel, WTOP, invitations, and Mary Pauline Perry, professional assistant.

Huguenot Society To Have French Program

The Huguenot Society of Washington will hold its first meeting of the New Year, Saturday, January 10, 8 p. m., in the Anderson House, 2118 Massachusetts ave., with Charles M. Jones of Delaware as host.

Germaine Goineau Johnson, in period costume, will entertain with selected eighteenth century songs of Normandy and Brittany. She is known to radio fans as "Germaine, the little French Girl," for her program entitled "Memories of France." As a good-will ambassadress of France she toured the United States singing and entertaining in many colleges and universities. Miss Myrtle Alcorn will accompany her at the piano.

Miss Mary F. Hawkins and Miss Clara Louise Brady are serving as program committee; Miss Emma Van der Kooy will receive reservations. The guest list will include the presidents of other patriotic organizations.

Hadassah Slates Musicale Tea

Washington chapter of Hadassah will inaugurate its 1948 events with a member-bring-a-member musicale and tea, Tuesday, January 13, 1:30 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel. The program is being arranged by Mrs. A. J. Kaplowitz.

For reservations telephone Mrs. Harry Rubeinstein, membership chairman, GE. 8922, or Mrs. Charles Oshinsky, co-membership chairman, GE. 6499.

Mrs. Gerber Heads ORT Convention Committee

Mrs. Leon Gerber of this city has been named cochairman of the Women's American ORT's tenth biennial convention scheduled for January 11 and 12 in New York City at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Henry Wallace, 1948 presidential candidate, will be principal speaker at an afternoon session on Monday. His topic will be announced later.

Representative Jacob J. Javitz of New York will be the spotlighted speaker at a session open to the public, Sunday night in the Belmont Plaza Hotel; as will Dr. Samuel Gringaus, president, Council of Liberated Jews of the United States Zone of Germany. Also included on the program will be violin solos by Kenneth Gordon. Mrs. Maurice Finkelstein, national president of Women's American ORT, will preside.

Convention goers will hear Mrs. Anita Libman Lebeson, author of "Jewish Pioneers in America" and former instructor at the University of Illinois, discuss "Recall to Life" at the opening session Sunday morning.

Recent accomplishments in rehabilitation projects in the 22 countries in which ORT (Organization for Rehabilitaiton through Training) is active, especially in the DP camps of Europe, will be reviewed, national officers elected and expansion plans for 1948 discussed. Exhibits made by students in the DP camps of Germany, in the French and Cuban ORT schools and from the ORT trade school and Bramson school in New York City will be featured. Members of chapters from coast to coast and guests from Canada will attend the daily sessions of the conclave.

Patience Needed for 'Dawdlers'

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every individual has a definite rate of speed so that his actions, his talking, his thinking are all part of the pattern which gives him his own particular personality. Some persons talk so swiftly that words flow off their tongues in a stream; others pull out the words until everyone says, "Oh, doesn't she drawl, though?"

The speedy ones can, in the twinkle of an eye, put everything in the home into place, sweep, dust and wash dishes. Another individual will putter lovingly, or stop to read a book or look out of the window, so that the work in the home takes forever to get done.

Children are of these same general types and all the graduations between. It is utterly useless to make them feel inferior, or nervous and harried, in order to make the slow ones work and talk and act at the same pace as the swift ones.

Yet parents are forever attempting to shove the child along. There are so many acts of a child's day which a parent has learned to skip through at a fast pace. She has learned to bathe, dress herself, comb hair and apply cosmetics almost without thinking. But the child finds these self-same acts fascinating in themselves. He loiters and enjoys the running water, the slow way it seeps out of the tub, the lather of soap, the fun of tub-toys, the crowding of toes into stockings—all the acts in which adults have lost interest.

So the parent stands about waiting and waiting while the child dawdles at his task, wild with impatience because the acts in which she is interested are being impeded by his slowness.

It's well to decide whether this particular child is naturally slow-moving, or whether the dawdling is the result of intense interest. In either case allow more time for experimentation.

Both types of child may need some help when it is essential that an appointment be met, school be reached on time, or some event come off as scheduled. This needn't be an unpleasant urging which makes the child tense and cross and incites him to a speed foreign to his nature; but just a pleasant helpfulness. "Here, we have to get to Auntie's on time for lunch. I'll help you put on those shoes. Next time you can have fun lacing them."

There is no crime in being slow but it can seem like one if mother makes a virtue and necessity of speed.

Six Post Ads Rated Among Best of Kind

Six advertisements which appeared in The Washington Post on September 25 have been rated among the best of their kind in America.

This conclusion is based on a study made of 112 issues of newspapers in the United States and Canada since 1939 by the Advertising Research Foundation as part of a continuing investigation into what people read.

Readers of The Washington Post were shown to have more than usual interest in many forms of advertising, according to the study made here in September and just now published. Both men and women read Post amusement ads, for example, to a greater degree than is average for other newspapers.

Women readers of The Washington Post read department store ads to the same extent that women do elsewhere, but men here showed more interest in them than is usual.

Best Read National Ad

Best read national ad in the surveyed issue of The Washington Post was one for Sinclair gasoline. So much interest was shown by Post readers in this advertisement, which appeared on page 15 of the second section, that it became the fourth best read ad in the automotive group for all ads studied in 112 newspapers since 1939.

Best read local ad in The Washington Post for September 25 was a Hecht Co. full page on towels and sheets. This was read by 65 per cent of the women and 24 per cent of the men. Tied with 24 per cent for men readership was the ad of the Potomac Cooperative Federation, selling the financial benefits of membership. This rating put the Federation ad in first place in the "local financial" classification for any ad studied since February, 1945.

Liquor Store Copy

An ad for Clark's liquore store tied for first place in reader interest among all liquor store advertisements in the entire country since the studies began more than eight years ago. An ad for the Barrel House liquor store tied for ninth place in the Nation for readership in this category of stores.

George Washington University's small ad announcing registration dates got sufficient readership from women readers of that day's issue of The Washington Post to take third place in the country among "local school" ads. A quarter page ad offering luggage at Fogel's took over fourth place in the 112 surveys for stores of this type.

Readership ratings were obtained by actual interviews with readers of The Washington Post by field investigators sent here by the Advertising Research Foundation. They went through the September 25 Post with the reader, page by page, and item by item, marking what had been noticed, what had not.

Ad ratings were determined in two ways. First came the absolute figure: for example, 65 per cent of all women noticed the Hecht Co. full page, 54 per cent noticed a Woodward & Lothrop five-column ad, 50 per cent remembered having seen a Julius Garfinckel seven-column ad, 43 per cent noticed a quarter-page Lansburgh dress offering and 38 per cent remembered a smaller Jelleff's ad on fur coats.

Further Refinement

A further refinement in ratings was made by using an index which adjusted for different size ads. Thus a 50 per cent readership for a full page would have an index only half that of a 50 per cent readership for a half page. On this index basis the top scores were made by The Mode, for men readers, and by Yeager's for women readers.

Readers of The Washington Post show more interest in editorials than is common for other newspapers, according to this survey. Men readers of The Washington Post also read the financial news more closely than is usual elsewhere.

Mary Haworth's column received top interest from women and Shirley Povich was the columnist read by the most men. Drew Pearson and Walter Lippmann, of the syndicated columnists, got the highest attention from men.

Best read story in the paper that morning was one about a woman who was beaten by her husband and sent to jail instead of the hospital. Both men and women read that, and looked at the picture of the woman's bruised face and black eye.

Second best read story for women was one on a child custody case, while the men's second rated story was Sumner Welles' testimony in the Hans Eisler deportation hearing.

The Washington Post is the first Washington newspaper to be studied by the Advertising Research Foundation. Hagerstown and Richmond papers are the only others from this part of the country to be included in the 112 studies made so far.

Churchill Defeats Cold, Eats Hearty Meal, Takes Ride

Marrakech, French Morocco, Jan. 4 (AP).—Winston Churchill, gruff and hungry after a bout with a bout with a heavy cold and bronchitis, ate a hearty meal at a public restaurant today and then went for a two-hour automobile ride.

Churchill was reported disgruntled at the fact that the press took such a serious view of his illness that several correspondents booked transportation for Marrakech.

Churchill, who came to Marrakesh to write his memoirs, was dismissed yesterday from the hospital where he went for a lung X-ray.

At luncheon today, the 73-year-old Churchill ate soup, fish with mayonnaise, veal souffle, cake with whipped cream, tangerines and coffee and smoked a cigar.

Caterpillar Club to Have Unit Here

By Charles J. Yarbrough
Post Reporter

The boys who borrowed the rest of their lives from nylon you couldn't buy can't forget the debt.

They'll band together in a Washington chapter of the famed Caterpillar Club in National Airport's President Room at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Its prospective membership rolls bulging with World War II fliers, the Caterpillar Club is made up of airmen who have made forced jumps from disabled aircraft. Its name comes from the lowly silkworm which made all of the prewar and early war parachutes but the designation has survived modernization by nylon.

Memorable Initiation

There are no dues, no officers and few meetings. The only initiation is the toughest of any—that first, whirling, dizzying plunge through space; then the body-wracking jerk that means the chute has opened and you're a member—if you survive the jump.

William H. Mooney of 1913 N. Troy st., Arlington, Va., now a 27-year-old District fireman, and acting chairman "joined" on a clear, crisp day over Misburg, Germany, on November 26, 1944.

A bombardier-navigator in a B-24, Mooney bailed out at 22,000 feet in weather "as clear as a bell." The bomber had been under attack throughout its bombing run and enemy fighters riddled it—and Mooney's foot.

He went out in the clear, cold air, dropped 8000 feet before pulling the cord to open the chute. He landed in a German hospital; then a prison camp. He was liberated in April of 1945.

Twenty-five-year-old Frank Huntley, 3701 S. Four Mile Run rd., Arlington, now with Northwest Airlines, acting chairman of the Caterpillar Club's organization drive, was initiated 14,000 feet over the Utah wastelands January 3, 1944, "at 4:50 p. m."

The right aileron of his B-17, heavy with ice, snapped off and the big craft went into a spin. Huntley hit the mushy-looking overcast; became a member when his chute carried him to earth. Six other members of the crew didn't join. They died in the wreckage.

The Caterpillar Club, almost as old as the parachute itself, began as a mythical organization. Among its early members were the mail fliers, Col. Charles Lindberg among them with four emergency jumps. Gen. James H. Doolittle was another. It had a major general—George E. Leach—in its ranks as early as 1935.

Acting as a voluntary recorder, then Maj. Falk Harmel, had a list of at least 705 names in the mythical club—eight of them women. Harmel, a lieutenant colonel in World War II, now lives at 709 Longfellow st. nw.

Town Reads Scriptures From Beginning to End

Covington, Ind., Jan. 4 (AP).—This town's demonstration of "Bible consciousness"—reading of the Old and New Testaments from beginning to end—was completed early today, 74 hours after it started on the stroke of the new year.

The marathon was conducted in the Fountain County Courthouse with 175 volunteer readers working half-day relays.

SEC Moving 600 Workers Back to D. C.

"Packing its bags" in Philadelphia, the Securities Exchange Commission is finally moving back home to Washington, with the first contingent arriving here tomorrow.

The SEC, created by the late President Roosevelt to police Wall Street, will occupy Annex No. 1 at 131 Indiana ave. nw. and Annex No. 2 at 425 2d st. nw. They are adjacent structures formerly occupied by the War Assets Administration and prior to that by Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

200 Give Up Jobs

About 600 of the SEC's more than 800 employes are making the move to Washington. The others, chiefly clerical workers, elected to give up their jobs rather than move.

Return of the SEC, removed from Washington in March of 1942 because of war-crowded conditions, has been discussed for more than a year, and brings a $3,620,000 annual payroll to the city.

Cost to the Government in moving the SEC's tons of documents and records and employes and their families will be about $210,000, but by occupying a Government-owned property a $200,000 annual rent bill will be saved.

To Take About Three Weeks

The move is expected to take about three weeks.

The SEC will resume its work in Washington without a top executive, as Chairman James J. Caffrey left the agency December 31 to begin private law practice in New York.

Other commissioners include Edmond M. Hanrahan, Richard B. McEntire and Harry McDonald.

300 Have Found Housing

About 300 of the SEC employes moving from Philadelphia have found housing here, it was reported yesterday, and the SEC's housing committee is seeking about 150 furnished rooms and a like number of apartments for others.

Many employes will probably commute to Philadelphia until they find housing here, but others will no longer have to commute there from Washington.

One family that has found housing is that of the Joseph Cirminello family with 3-year-old quadruplets, living at 1653 Colonial ter., Arlington, Va.

The housing committee is troubled about other families with only two or three children, however.

Persons with housing accommodations for one or more persons are asked to call the committee, District 3633.

1947 Growth Tops Record For Fairfax

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Fairfax County grew faster in more directions last year than ever before in its history.

Influx of new residents put the population close to 100,000, an increase of about 15,000 during 1947. This was both the cause and effect of the record-breaking $28,753,278 in building permits issued last year. Their estimated value equaled the figure for those issued in the six preceeding years combined.

Deeds at High Mark

Property changing hands set a new record. The clerk of the Circuit Court recorded 15,865 deeds and trusts. Previous high was 12,647 in 1946.

School enrollments reached a new top of 11,062 by December 1. To afford adequate teaching facilities, the county started construction of nine new schools, or additions to existing buildings during the year. Estimated cost totaled $1,616,000. Plans for $2,500,000 more school building are in the paper stage.

Superintendent W. T. Woodson said one new structure, including four new classrooms and a cafeteria at Centreville, will open today. Work on an auditorium is not yet completed. Two more classrooms are planned for the school.

Tax Rates Boosted

To finance the change from a rural to a suburban community, Fairfax last year boosted tax rates on real estate and personal property 20 per cent to a record $3.07 per $100. County Treasurer Louis V. Coyner estimated revenue from these sources would double that of any previous year.

To serve the rapidly growing county, officials are discussing a new wing for historic Fairfax Courthouse.

The boom also has political repercussions.

Acting on the presumption that the increased population meant more Republicans, county Republicans held a convention in November that broke all modern records for attendance and ambition. They set up machinery to beat the bushes for recruits, and called for Republican primaries in the county and State.

$35 Millions Asked for Md. Roads in 1948

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—The State Highway Advisory Council not only has recommended $35,757,044 be spent on Maryland's roads this year, but its chairman reported most of the money will be available without resorting to issuance of bonds.

In its first report to Governor Lane yesterday, the council noted the 1947 General Assembly authorized issuance of 100 million dollars in road bonds.

The council said this would give the State between 175 million dollars and 200 million dollars for the next five years to "bring the State roads system, now inferior to other comparable States, up to modern standards.

Chairman Howard Bruce noted the State Roads Commission has 15 million dollars in bank, and increased gasoline taxes and charges on motor vehicle titles should up available funds to between 25 million dollars and 30 million dollars.

Bruce said this should enable the State to carry on improvements until next fall and might even meet all road expenses in 1948. Of this year's expenditures $16,891,567, will go into building primary routes. The only allotment for a specific road is $4,500,000 for the proposed dual-lane highway between Baltimore and its new municipal airport at Friendship Church in Anne Arundel County.

The council said "enormous expenditures" are required in the section of Maryland adjacent to the District of Columbia, and said the State is "entitled to receive Federal assistance by direct financial contribution," in addition to the regular Federal aid on a matching-funds basis.

Congestion of Maryland roads is increased, said the council, "by the large number of persons who live in the District of Columbia but are employed in Federal installations in Maryland."

Noting that the proposed expenditure this year is four times as much as spent by Maryland in the past ten years, the council said it was a major undertaking in which acquisition of rights-of-way was the "most difficult" immediate problem.

The council's recommended expenditures covered only the next two years. In addition to the $35,757,044 for 1948, it listed $48,240,800 for the next year.

Ship Hits Mine Continues Voyage

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States Line freighter Pioneer Cove struck a mine in the North Sea today and sent out a distress call, but the Dutch coast guard said the 8103-ton ship was able to continue her voyage apparently unassisted six hours later.

Charles Hand of the United States Lines said in New York that the ship was en route from Hamburg to London, where she was to take on cargo for the United States. She normally carries a crew of about 50.

Widow Dead By Bullet Held Suicide

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a suicide verdict yesterday in the fatal shooting Saturday of Mrs. Frances B. Netherland of Kenwood, Md.

Mrs. Netherland, widow of a Montgomery County physician, was found in her bedroom, lying between two beds, with a bullet wound in her head and a .38 caliber revolver at her feet.

Her husband, Dr. Frank B. Netherland, died about three years ago, and police said Mrs. Netherland had been despondent since.

The body was found by her sister, Mrs. Gladys Campbell of Martinsville, Va., and a neighbor, Dr. Walter Teichmann, 909 Dorset ave., Kenwood. Mrs. Campbell became alarmed when she arrived to find a telegram announcing her planned visit still in the door, and called Dr. Techmann to enter the house with her.

Police said Mrs. Netherland recently underwent treatment at Sheppard-Pratt Hospital in Baltimore. Her 12-year-old son, Frank B., jr., home from a military academy, was attending a motion picture show with Dr. Teichmann's son.

The body was removed to the William R. Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Sewer, Water Connection Costs Debated

The group decided it is opposed to the increase in cost of sewer and water connections from $85 to more than $500 per house where the lot faces an improved street but it wasn't sure just what could be done about it.

It was voted to call a mass meeting of Montgomery and Prince Georges County builders, master plumbers, veterans and civic groups at which members of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission will be invited to discuss the problem.

The meeting will be called for Saturday at 2:30 p. m. in the Liquor Control Board Building, Silver Spring, by Donald S. Gingery, chairman of the Montgomery County section of the Home Builders of Metropolitan Washington.

Gingery said the Montgomery and Prince Georges County delegations to the Maryland General Assembly and County Commissioners of the two counties also may be asked to take part in the meeting.

Yesterday's meeting was called by Gingery and G. Leonard Daymude, president of the Washington Suburban Master Plumbers Association.

The Sanitary Commission obtained a special act at the special session of the Legislature empowering it to permit plumbers to make connections which heretofore were required by law to be made by the commission.

The plumbers soon found that there was a fly in the ointment. The Sanitary Commission had authority to open streets without a permit but T. Howard Duckett, counsel to the commission, ruled the body could not delegate this authority and that plumbers had to obtain permits from nearly a hundred various jurisdictions before they could cut into a street.

The sanitary commission last week announced it would retain the task of opening improved streets and the plumbers could handle unimproved connections.

At the same time the commission announced that it's new rates would be approximately $200 higher on each of the sewer and water connections so that it will cost approximately $500 to install water and sewer where streets are improved.

Citizens Units To Hear Allen, Clapp, West

District citizens associations face a crowded schedule of meetings this week.

Visiting speakers include Col. Robert S. Allen, author and columnist, Vernon E. West, corporation counsel, and Raymond Clapp, acting director of the Board of Public Welfare.

Md. Forests' Restoration Seen by Lane

Belief that Maryland's forestry practices eventually will restore the State's woodlands was expressed here yesterday by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.

Speaking on radio station WTOP, the Maryland governor called forest land "our greatest renewable natural resource," and added that "as we conserve or destroy our natural resources, so shall we prosper or fail."

H. C. Buckingham, director of the Maryland Department of Forests and Parks, and John E. Clark, chairman of the State's Board of Natural Resources, also spoke.

Buckingham said that Maryland now has six women fire tower watchers, one of them, Mrs. Mary E. Duvall of Allegany County, having served 24 seasons on the Warrior Mountain Tower. He reported that smoking continues to be the principal cause of forest fires.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

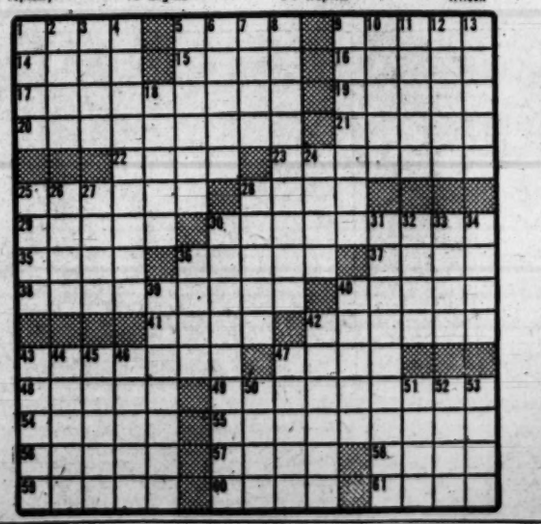
Solution to Saturday's Puzzle



BARNABY

Mr. O'Malley! Dinner is over. Aunt Minerva wouldn't wait for you—
I've no time for food, Barnaby—
I've been over at the United Nations all day long writing my vituperative plea for the Pixie Nation at the Council.
It's on napkins!
Yes. My office is in the cafeteria . . . I was about to say, m'boy, this great argument for justice is complete. Except for one bit of important data . . .
I can't remember what our original grievance was . . .

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Fairfax County grew faster in more directions last year than ever before in its history.

Influx of new residents put the population close to 100,000, an increase of about 15,000 during 1947. This was both the cause and effect of the record-breaking $28,753,278 in building permits issued last year. Their estimated value equaled the figure for those issued in the six preceeding years combined.

Deeds at High Mark

Property changing hands set a new record. The clerk of the Circuit Court recorded 15,865 deeds and trusts. Previous high was 12,647 in 1946.

School enrollments reached a new top of 11,062 by December 1. To afford adequate teaching facilities, the county started construction of nine new schools, or additions to existing buildings during the year. Estimated cost totaled $1,616,000. Plans for $2,500,000 more school building are in the paper stage.

Superintendent W. T. Woodson said one new structure, including four new classrooms and a cafeteria at Centreville, will open today. Work on an auditorium is not yet completed. Two more classrooms are planned for the school.

Tax Rates Boosted

To finance the change from a rural to a suburban community, Fairfax last year boosted tax rates on real estate and personal property 20 per cent to a record $3.07 per $100. County Treasurer Louis V. Coyner estimated revenue from these sources would double that of any previous year.

To serve the rapidly growing county, officials are discussing a new wing for historic Fairfax Courthouse.

The boom also has political repercussions.

Acting on the presumption that the increased population meant more Republicans, county Republicans held a convention in November that broke all modern records for attendance and ambition. They set up machinery to beat the bushes for recruits, and called for Republican primaries in the county and State.

Only vital statistic to fall off in 1947 were applications for marriage licenses. The county issued 430 last year, well below the figures for 1942 or 1946, but above those of any prewar year.

$35 Millions Asked for Md. Roads in 1948

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—The State Highway Advisory Council not only has recommended $35,757,044 be spent on Maryland's roads this year, but its chairman reported most of the money will be available without resorting to issuance of bonds.

In its first report to Governor Lane yesterday, the council noted the 1947 General Assembly authorized issuance of 100 million dollars in road bonds.

The council said this would give the State between 175 million dollars and 200 million dollars for the next five years to "bring the State roads system, now inferior to other comparable States, up to modern standards."

Chairman Howard Bruce noted the State Roads Commission has 15 million dollars in bank, and increased gasoline taxes and charges on motor vehicle titles should up available funds to between 25 million dollars and 30 million dollars.

Bruce said this should enable the State to carry on improvements until next fall and might even meet all road expenses in 1948. Of this year's expenditures $16,891,567, will go into building primary routes. The only allotment for a specific road is $4,500,000 for the proposed dual-lane highway between Baltimore and its new municipal airport at Friendship Church in Anne Arundel County.

The council said "enormous expenditures" are required in the section of Maryland adjacent to the District of Columbia, and said the State is "entitled to receive Federal assistance by direct financial contribution," in addition to the regular Federal aid on a matching-funds basis.

Congestion of Maryland roads is increased, said the council, "by the large number of persons who live in the District of Columbia but are employed in Federal installations in Maryland."

Noting that the proposed expenditure this year is four times as much as spent by Maryland in the past ten years, the council said it was a major undertaking in which acquisition of rights-of-way was the "most difficult" immediate problem.

The council's recommended expenditures covered only the next two years. In addition to the $35,757,044 for 1948, it listed $48,240,800 for the next year.

Ship Hits Mine Continues Voyage

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States Line freighter Pioneer Cove struck a mine in the North Sea today and sent out a distress call, but the Dutch coast guard said the 6103-ton ship was able to continue her voyage apparently unassisted six hours later.

Charles Hand of the United States Lines said in New York that the ship was en route from Hamburg to London, where she was to take on cargo for the United States. She normally carries a crew of about 50.

Businessmen Meet Here

Five hundred small business men throughout the country will gather here January 14 in observance of Small Business Day, Lyle Jones, Washington representative of the National Small Business Men's Association, said yesterday.

Widow Dead By Bullet Held Suicide

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a suicide verdict yesterday in the fatal shooting Saturday of Mrs. Frances B. Netherland of Kenwood, Md.

Mrs. Netherland, widow of a Montgomery County physician, was found in her bedroom, lying between two beds, with a bullet wound in her head and a .38 caliber revolver at her feet.

Her husband, Dr. Frank B. Netherland, died about three years ago, and police said Mrs. Netherland had been despondent since.

The body was found by her sister, Mrs. Gladys Campbell of Martinsville, Va., and a neighbor, Dr. Walter Teichmann, 909 Dorset ave., Kenwood. Mrs. Campbell became alarmed when she arrived to find a telegram announcing her planned visit still in the door, and called Dr. Techmann to enter the house with her.

Police said Mrs. Netherland recently underwent treatment at Sheppard-Pratt Hospital in Baltimore. Her 12-year-old son, Frank B., jr., home from a military academy, was attending a motion picture show with Dr. Teichmann's son.

The body was removed to the William R. Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Sewer, Water Connection Costs Debated

Nearby Maryland's sewer and water connection controversy was debated yesterday at a meeting of approximately 100 builders, plumbers, veterans and civic group representatives at Kensington Firehouse.

The group decided it is opposed to the increase in cost of sewer and water connections from $85 to more than $500 per house where the lot faces an improved street but it wasn't sure just what could be done about it.

It was voted to call a mass meeting of Montgomery and Prince Georges County builders, master plumbers, veterans and civic groups at which members of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission will be invited to discuss the problem.

The meeting will be called for Saturday at 2:30 p. m. in the Liquor Control Board Building, Silver Spring, by Donald S. Gingery, chairman of the Montgomery County section of the Home Builders of Metropolitan Washington.

Gingery said the Montgomery and Prince Georges County delegations to the Maryland General Assembly and County Commissioners of the two counties also may be asked to take part in the meeting.

Yesterday's meeting was called by Gingery and G. Leonard Daymude, president of the Washington Suburban Master Plumbers Association.

The Sanitary Commission obtained a special act at the special session of the Legislature empowering it to permit plumbers to make connections which heretofore were required by law to be made by the commission.

The plumbers soon found that there was a fly in the ointment. The Sanitary Commission had authority to open streets without a permit but T. Howard Duckett, counsel to the commission, ruled the body could not delegate this authority and that plumbers had to obtain permits from nearly a hundred various jurisdictions before they could cut into a street.

The sanitary commission last week announced it would retain the task of opening improved streets and the plumbers could handle unimproved connections.

At the same time the commission announced that it's new rates would be approximately $200 higher on each of the sewer and water connections so that it will cost approximately $500 to install water and sewer where streets are improved.

Md. Forests' Restoration Seen by Lane

Belief that Maryland's forestry practices eventually will restore the State's woodlands was expressed here yesterday by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.

Speaking on radio station WTOP, the Maryland governor called forest land "our greatest renewable natural resource," and added that "as we conserve or destroy our natural resources, so shall we prosper or fail."

H. C. Buckingham, director of the Maryland Department of Forests and Parks, and John E. Clark, chairman of the State's Board of Natural Resources, also spoke.

Buckingham said that Maryland now has six women fire tower watchers, one of them, Mrs. Mary E. Duvall of Allegany County, having served 24 seasons on the Warrior Mountain Tower. He reported that smoking continues to be the principal cause of forest fires.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Don't Yell, Deaf Smith. Here's Your Golden Miss

In all our parade of strange place names nobody remembered Davenport (Iowa) until F. M. Robbins of 2225 N. Pollard st., Arlington, Va., called it to mind yesterday.

District Liner Robbins adds that Lena is in Illinois, and that you'll also find a Sandwich there. From Minnesota he contributes Sleepy Eye.

Golden, Miss.; Many, La.; Lame Deer, Mont.; Killdeer, N. Dak.; Water Proof, La., or Guntown, Miss.

Teatticket, Mass.; Junior, W. Va.; Marked Tree, Ark.; Post Carbon, Pa., and Turkey, N. C.

E. M. of 3110 Wisconsin ave. nw. writes:

"Have you been to see Daisy? It may be Difficult, and you may end up in Defeat—but they're all towns in Tennessee."

All of which reminds me that Yell County is in Arkansas, which is just a whoop and a holler (geographically speaking) from Deaf Smith County, Texas.

And from deep in the heart of our biggest State, comes this letter from Mrs. E. Campbell, 2002 N. Oak st., Mineral Wells, Tex.:

"There's a Bad Axe in Michigan, an Accident in Maryland and a Scalp Level in Pennsylvania.

"I'm a native of Washington and get The Washington Post regularly down here. I enjoy your column and would like to see a whole page of it."

So would I. I'd run it one column at a time and catch up with my mail for a few days.

TAXI TROUBLES TAX TRAVELERS' TEMPERS

Thousands of Washingtonians passed through Union Station over the holidays, and had occasion to refresh their memories regarding the status of taxi service from that point.

To get a cab at the station, one must either:

1. Somehow manage to outrace (or outmaneuver) everybody else when the empties pull in, or

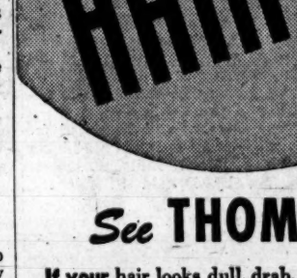
2. Having failed to snag an empty, must find a driver who will condescend to take him along.

Most people find that two large suitcases have a tendency to reduce their speed and maneuverability; somebody else usually gets the empties first.

So weary traveler then begins a hopeful canvass of the partially filled vehicles. The ensuing conversation follows a rigid pattern:

"Southeast? Nah, I'm gonna Wardman Park . . . Where ya goin', mister? Southeast? Nah—I'm gonna Statler . . . Southeast, driver? Nah—I'm gonna Mayflower."

This goes on until the traveler begins to grow weak, and each of his suitcases weighs 500 pounds. Then the poor goof lugs his baggage out front, and catches the first cab which happens to chance past.



Since this organized confusion is obviously the worst possible way to run things, it seems to me that some better method might be devised.

For example everybody might be lined up in the order of his arrival, and served in that order—with group-riding "fillers" being drawn from the waiting line in chronological order.

Or perhaps it would be better to mark off certain "stops" for passengers headed in various directions with the travelers queuing up at the proper "stop" and waiting for their turns in orderly fashion.

But whatever the method, there must surely be a better system than the present "nah-I'm-gonna-Statler" routine.

THIS COMPLAINT SOUNDS SLIGHTLY EXAGGERATED

W. M. O'C. complains that some bus drivers have no regard for the comfort of their passengers.

He says that he boarded a bus one balmy day recently and found the vehicle's heater going full blast although the passengers were perspiring freely.

Because of the season, the paying customers were all wearing coats—and of course many of the ladies were decked out in their furs.

"It was so hot," says W. M. O'C., "that a man carrying a lunch box to work discovered later that his sandwiches had been toasted.

"But the driver didn't mind—because he had removed his leather jacket and was working in his shirt sleeves."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—Michael of Romania, who abdicated, never found happiness as a ruler. When his father, King Carol, returned to Bucharest and took the throne again, Michael told him: "I'm glad you're back. I'm terribly tired of wearing long trousers and high hat, and having to go to places where I don't want to go." . . . On the day Carol first left Romania, the royal valet de chambre entered the bedroom of the 5-year-old Michael, who asked him: "Am I really the King now?" The valet told him: "Yes, Your Majesty." Michael replied: "Then bring me a piece of chocolate cake." . . . And when Carol was restored to the throne, Michael asked his English tutor: "I'm not King any more, so can I go out and play with the boys again?"

Senator McGrath, the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is finding his duties burdensome, and may give up the chairmanship to be succeeded by Jim McGranery.

Sinclair Lewis is returning to New York. When he finishes his new novel, he'll go to Europe. . . .

Gummo Marx, who was the fifth member of the Marx Brothers act, says that when he worked with his brothers he did a dance routine and was known as America's Slowest Whirlwind Dancer . . .

Edmond O'Brien came home from the studio where he had just finished the final scene of "Another Part of the Forest," and dropped wearily into a chair. He gave a perfunctory greeting to his brother, Bill, and told him of the harrowing day he had spent. "I blew up in my lines, time and time again," O'Brien raged. "Everybody angered me. The usual hangers-on annoyed me. Everything went wrong. I'm so tired of these routines, tired of the people, tired of Hollywood." He noticed that his playwright brother, who was listening sympathetically, sat idly in front of a typewriter because his left arm was in a sling. "What happened to you," Edmond asked . . . "Oh, nothing much," Bill shrugged, urging his brother to continue, "I only broke three fingers. Go on . . ."

The bearded Monty Woolley, now vacationing in N. Y., visited Tony Soma, the 52d St. cafe owner, to induce him to grow a beard again. It was Woolley who once persuaded Tony to grow a long beard, by suggesting: "Men ought to defy women by raising something which they cannot." . . .

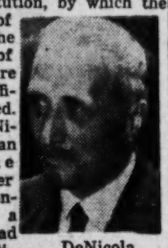
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rome Under Two Regimes

By Drew Pearson

Rome (by wireless)—Nine days ago, the first President of the Italian Republic signed the new Italian constitution, by which the trappings of fascism and the folderol of monarchy were finally and officially buried. Enrico de Nicola, the man who became President under this new constitution, is a lawyer who had to leave Parliament after Mussolini came into power and who has been living quietly in Naples ever since.



DeNicola

I called on President de Nicola two days after the new constitution was signed. You can easily understand why the people of Italy revere him. He has direct, smiling eyes and he talks with such clarity and eloquence that you feel as if you understand him even though you don't speak Italian.

Officially, Premier Alcide de Gasperi runs Italy; actually, however, President de Nicola is a quiet backstage tower of strength. Having suffered a lot for democracy, he doesn't want to see Italy lose its big chance to make democracy live. And last year, when the Italian peace treaty came up for ratification, President de Nicola quietly called in the leaders of all parties—even including the Communists—and told them that Italy should follow a policy of buckling down, accepting her defeat, and working to build herself up from the bottom. Public debates over accepting the peace terms, he advised, would only sound a sour note with the rest of the world. They took his advice. Italy has been working ever since.

Calling on President de Nicol, I told him of the tremendous number of Americans of all walks of life who had contributed to the friendship train. Typical of their spirit, I said, was a school teacher in Trenton, N. J., Mrs. Laura Marsavitz, who came to the train with a dozen of her small students. She was very poor and explained that she had little to give but she handed me a Bible.

"This Bible," she said, "was won as a prize when I worked in a parachute factory and made parachutes faster than anyone else. Some of those parachutes may have been used over Sicily. I do not know. I only know that I am now teaching my children from this Bible that we must have no more war.

"Therefore," continued the school teacher, "I ask that you take this Bible to the people of Italy and tell them that one who once made parachutes to be used against them now is teaching her children that the Italians are our friends and that we must all live by the Sermon on the Mount."

So I gave the Bible from the school teacher in Trenton to the President of Italy. He seemed greatly touched.

"Please tell this school teacher," he said, "that I appreciate her thoughtfulness—I appreciate it from the bottom of my heart. And I accept this Bible on behalf of the people of Italy.

"Please also tell the American people what a great thing their friendship train is. Italy will not forget this help. And we are especially grateful because we know it is from the heart. Please find the means of thanking them all for me."

Then, turning to the problems of Italy, the President continued:

"Italy has been united only a relatively short time. We also underwent a dictatorship which did us great harm. We came into dictatorship by force and we overthrew it by force. We were also defeated in the war, and we suffered far greater damage than some of our neighbors, who lost all the battles but won the war. And when the Germans retreated, they destroyed everything.

"But in a brief interval we have rebuilt our railroads, replaced our bridges and begun to repair our buildings. We have only the will to work, but we are working. There is more determination in Italy than ever before. We have hope.

"But we also need help," concluded President de Nicola, "and that's why we appreciate so much your aid. Please find a means of thanking the American people for the great help they have given us."

Not far from the war-scarred port of Naples and just a few kilometers from the blue-green Mediterranean is an illustration of the miracles wrought by the Italians in rebuilding their country. On a hill stand the bare, crumpled walls of the most famous monastery in the world—the abbey of Monte Cassino.

Cassino Abbey was built 529 years after the death of Christ. Fourteen hundred years later the Nazis, having no regard for God or man, converted it into a fortress blocking the advance of the U. S. Third Army. The monastery is now reduced to a gaunt and gaping skeleton.

Standing on a neighboring mountain and looking down over the broad valley, you can see an example of what an atomic war may be like in the future. The 7000 people of Cassino lived in ancient, hand-built houses at the foot of the mountain. When our bombers came over they weren't always accurate and every time they missed the monastery, Cassino's hillside homes rocketed skyward to start a new avalanche down the mountain. The whole town was leveled.

Today, Cassino is rising from its own ashes. Under the shadow of thousands of crosses which cover the graves of American, British, Australian and Polish soldiers, the people of Cassino are rebuilding their town. They work with machines provided by the UNRRA and with materials left behind by UNRRA.

The people of Cassino are not bitter. They figure that when a little town like theirs gets food from friends, 5000 miles away, then there is hope. And they hope that never again will there be another war. Cassino knows what war means.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN TENNESSEE . . . the volunteer state

Tennessee became a State in 1796, the 16th to be admitted to the Union. Previously, for a few years, the State of Franklin, comprising a large section of the present State of Tennessee, existed as the "first free and independent community established by men of American birth" on this continent. Our State acquired her nick-name . . . the "Volunteer State" . . . during the Spanish-American War when 30,000 patriots responded to a call for only 2800 volunteers. Tennesseans have continued to volunteer their services to our country through the ensuing years. We have given three Presidents to the United States . . . Andrew Jackson, Andrew Johnson and James K. Polk. Tennessee is well-favored in almost everything that contributes to the welfare of the human race . . . she is possessed of a genial climate . . . soils of abounding fertility and diversification . . . and a great variety of standing timber. Her landscapes are grand, beautiful and inspiring . . . and great rivers break through the lofty mountains into fruitful valleys teeming with the richness and fatness of the earth. The motto of Tennessee, "Agriculture and Commerce," is symbolic and descriptive of the opportunities and principal interests of the people of our State. The Tennessee Valley Authority is a vital force in the post-war commercial and industrial advancement of Tennessee and the South, as well as a powerful factor in fostering agricultural progress and providing essential flood control. We Tennesseans here in Washington are helping our friends back home in the promotion of agriculture and the advancement of the commerce of Tennessee . . . our State Society each year sponsors the Cotton Ball to disseminate knowledge of the many uses of this versatile product of our soil. The Tennessee State Society appreciates the kindness of The Hecht Company in telling of the achievements of our State . . . and we are glad to have this opportunity to say that Tennessee regards with humility and sober reflection her role in the historical development of the atomic bomb at Oak Ridge. The people of Tennessee are bending every effort to the preservation of peace across the world, so that the incredible power of atomic energy released through the experiments in Tennessee may be used as a constructive force for the betterment of mankind and an instrument of peace and prosperity.

President, Tennessee State Society

● TENNESSEE . . . A leader in the industrial, agricultural and cultural growth and development of the South. Nashville, the capital, is called the "Athens of the South," because it is the seat of many great educational institutions and has the only exact replica of the Parthenon of ancient Athens. Memphis, giant of industry and commerce, is the largest inland cotton market in the United States . . . and Knoxville is a hardwood lumber and coal market. Chattanooga is a textile manufacturing center . . . the dynamo of Dixie as heart of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

● TENNESSEE . . . Predominantly an agricultural State. She ranks fourth in the Nation as a cotton grower and produces corn, wheat, oats, barley, hay, potatoes and tobacco. Each year Memphis holds a gay Cotton Carnival, in honor of King Cotton . . . high-lighted by the selection of a Queen of Cotton, who makes a world tour. Tennessee is also the center of the walking horse industry . . . Tennessee walking horses are famed around the world. The State specializes in breeding of Jersey cows, furnishing foundation stock to other States. Dairying is an important farm industry.

● TENNESSEE . . . A large producer of lumber . . . is famed for Tennessee cedar. Timber still covers more than one-half the State. Tennessee is a leading Southern State in variety of minerals and produces coal, zinc, copper, lime, aluminum, phosphate, barite and magnesium. Tennessee marble adorns many of the most beautiful buildings of the world.

● TENNESSEE . . . Scene of one of the great scientific attainments of our age. Years of research into the mysteries of the Physical Realm culminated at Oak Ridge in the successful manufacture of the atomic bomb . . . which hastened the end of World War II . . . and which plays a leading role in the course of world events.

● TENNESSEE . . . Nerve center of the Tennessee Valley Authority — world-famed hydro-electric power and engineering development which harnesses the mighty power of the Tennessee River and its tributaries for the betterment of the South . . . through flood control and its tremendous hydo-electric plants . . . five of which are located within Tennessee. It also provides extensive navigation and recreational facilities.

● TENNESSEE . . . Treasures the shrines and mansions of three United States Presidents. "The Hermitage," home of Andrew Jackson, at Old Hickory . . . "The Oaks," home of James K. Polk, at Columbia . . . and the "Brick House" and "Tailor Shop" of Andrew Johnson at Greeneville. General Sam Houston and David Crockett, who gained fame in the early history of Texas, were both born in Tennessee, as were David Farragut, first Admiral of the United States Navy . . . General Nathan Bedford Forrest, wizard of the saddle . . . and Sergeant Alvin C. York, hero of World War I . . . Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State and revered American statesman, is also a Tennessean.
